De Llano Denies Rift With Leader

The Spanish War.

Gen. Franco smashed government lines in a drive on Castellon de la Plana. His bombers raked the Mediterranean coast and attacked three British ships.

Fighting in Streets.

By the United Press.

Gibraltar, June 7.—Dissension between insurgent Spanish troops and Italian and German volunteers was said tonight, in unconfirmed reports, to have developed into counter-revolutionary fighting in the streets of Seville.

Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, insurgent commander in the south with headquarters at Seville, was rumored to have informed Gen. Franco Seville no longer is "in accord" with Franco's policy.

[At Seville, Gen. de Llano tonight declared his friendship with Gen. Franco was "closer than ever," the Associated Press reported.

[The insurgent general said he was "tickled to death" by reports he was leader of an element which had broken with Franco.

[Fresh from a trip to Burgos, seat of the insurgent regime, de Llano in an interview gave full indorsement to Franco's policies.—Editor's note.]

One report said 14 persons were killed in the streets of Seville in clashes between insurgent troops, supposedly Phalangists (Spanish Fascists) and other insurgent elements favoring the Italians.

The Phalangists fear the Italians and Germans will demand territorial and other concessions in Spain as the price of their military aid.

Loyalist sources reported 14 persons were executed by insurgent firing squads today at La Linea, 4 miles north of here across the Spanish border, for distributing leaflets

Mercury Zooms As 1st Heat Wave Of 1938 Hits City

The hottest day of the year to date blew its sultry breath over Washington yesterday, with torrid breezes fanning the city.

Two heat prostrations were reported to the police as the mercury climbed to a high mark of 93 at 4:40 p. m.

While District residents donned their straw hats and panamas and went about coatless or in white suits, the weather man predicted partly cloudy and generally cooler today, with probable showers tomorrow.

Senate Allows D. C. Loan of $18,150,000; Building Plans Sped

Conferees Agree on Taxi Insurance; 18 Bills Passed in Day.

House Report Provides Funds to Start 60-Million Program.

By James D. Secrest.

Senate and House conferees yesterday reached an agreement on the District compulsory taxicab insurance bill as the Senate passed 18 local bills, 11 of which will go to the White House.

The two major bills approved by the Senate authorize the Commissioners to borrow $18,150,000 from the Public Works Administration and modernize the District zoning act of 1920.

Senator Tydings explained the basis of an agreement on the taxicab insurance bill as authorizing any cab owner to file an insurance policy, bond or cash deposit with the Public Utilities Commission with the amount directly proportional to the number of motor vehicles operated.

"That means that a fleet of 100 cabs will have to pay 100 times as much as the independent owner," he said.

The language of the accord has not been definitely agreed to, it was said, and the compromise is to be submitted to the A. F. of L. union of cab operators in Washington for approval before the conference report is filed.

The conferees left the amount of the unit policy or bond to be determined by the Public Utilities

Congressional action yesterday brought nearer a new, large-scale Government building program in and near Washington, the ultimate cost of which would exceed $60,000,000.

The House Appropriations Committee, in reporting out the last deficiency bill, recommended funds for a start on two Federal buildings, one for the War Department and one for the Social Security Administration and Railroad Retirement Board.

The War Department, whose units now are scattered in 19 buildings, would be housed in a $26,000,000 building to occupy an area just northeast of the Lincoln Memorial, bounded by Twenty-first and Twenty-third streets, C and E streets northwest. The first unit, which is all that is being authorized now, would cost $10,815,000. The House Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended $3,000,000 to buy land and start the project.

The Social Security Administration, now scattered in 11 buildings here and in Baltimore, and the Railroad Retirement Board, are promised a $14,250,000 building fronting on the Mall, in an area bounded by Third and Fourth streets, Independence avenue and D streets northwest. The House Appropriations Committee recom-

House Facing Battle Today For Memorial

Appropriations Group Is Split on $500,000 for Jefferson Shrine.

A bitter battle in the House today over the Thomas Jefferson Memorial was foreshadowed yesterday when members took the floor to assail and defend the $500,000 initial appropriation recommended in the second deficiency bill.

Representative Scott, youthful California Democrat who led the successful fight on the appropriation last year, announced that he would offer a motion today to strike out the memorial fund and propose as a substitute $6,000,000 for reinlistment allowances in the armed services.

That members of the House Appropriations Committee will be divided on the memorial was apparent from the sentence in the report accompanying the bill:

"Members of the committee in taking this action are reserving to themselves, individually, the right to express their views and vote their convictions with respect to the proposal."

Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, was principal target of members of the Jefferson Memorial Commission, who defended the John Russell Pope design.

Representative Boylan (Democrat), New York, and Representative Culkin (Republican), New York, asserted that Charles Moore, former chairman, was in complete accord with the commission and that Clarke had not protested until after he succeeded Moore.

Among others who assailed the memorial and asked delay in appropriating funds was Minority Leader Snell, of New York, and Representative Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma.

President Asks $50,000 to Aid Kidnaper Hunt

Urges Action by Congress; Finding of Cash Boy Ransom Bill Denied.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to provide $50,000 for running down the kidnapers of little James Bailey Cash, jr.

The 5-year-old child has been missing from his Princeton, Fla., home since May 28.

G-men have virtually abandoned hope of finding him alive, but are tracing $10,000 ransom which the child's father paid kidnapers in a vain effort to recover his son.

In a letter to Chairman Glass (Democrat), Virginia, of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the President suggested insertion of the $50,000 item in a deficiency bill now before the House.

The money would finance activities of a score of Federal agents now attempting to run down the 1,110 ransom bills.

No Ransom Bills.

Princeton, Fla., June 7 (U.P.).—A report that a $5 bill from the $10,000 ransom paid in vain for return of kidnaped Jimmy Cash had been passed at a Jacksonville filling station tonight was said by Sergt. H. V. Branch, of Jacksonville, to be without foundation.

Discovery of a bill, believed to be a part of the ransom paid by James B. Cash, sr., for return of his son was reported by Walter Honrath, 25, operator of a filling station at Jacksonville.

Branch told the United Press, however, "it was nothing like the numbers of the ransom money."

Chiang Facing Army Break Up; Southern 'Lord' Ready to Quit

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Wednesday, June 8.—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's popular front Chinese government, formed at the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese war 11 months ago, was reeling under blows from the Nipponese armed legions today.

A threatened split in the general's coalition came as Japanese planes again rained death on the great South China metropolis of Canton, in defiance of world protests against the aerial bombing of civilian centers, and as half a million Japanese soldiers converged on China's provisional capital in Hankow.

Direct diplomatic code radios from Hankow said without qualification that Gen. Li Tsung-jen, powerful South China militarist who was an implacable enemy of Chiang until the present war started, was in grave disagreement with Chiang and was threatening to withdraw to his home province in Kwangsi.

A desperate effort was being made to heal the differences and some diplomats thought a temporary healing might be effected. Eventually, however, it seemed certain that the popular front would split.

Bolt Averted By Conferees On Wage Bill

Ellender, Pepper Weigh Senate Appeal for New Colleagues.

Threat Is Fresh Peril to Plans for Early Adjournment.

By Sidney Olson.

Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

Complete collapse of the Senate-House conference on the wage-hour bill narrowly was averted yesterday and still is a definite threat, it was learned last night.

Two Southern Senators, Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, and Claude Pepper, of Florida, angry at departure of Senate conferees from flexible provisions of the Senate bill, threatened to return to the chamber and demand a mandate from the chair that Senate conferees be appointed.

Pepper and Ellender still have not abandoned this threat, although they decided not to carry it through yesterday on the hope that differentials favoring the South yet may be written into the measure.

Borah Plans "Fires."

With an unspoken filibuster threat hanging over the Senate's hopes of adjournment, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, a conferee, demanded insistently that a seven-year time limit be fixed definitely, at the end of which time 40 cents an hour will be the legal minimum wage throughout the Nation.

It was learned that Borah, who heartily sympathizes with rigid provisions of the House bill as modified to seven years instead of three by the amendment of Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, may "light a few fires" in the Senate to get support for the Walsh amendment.

Pivot man in the bitter sectional struggle is Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, Senate Labor Committee chairman and conferees' head.

Thomas for Flexibility.

Thomas believes the Senate bill constitutes a mandate for the attainment of the 40-40 limit (40 cents an hour minimum wages and 40 hours a week as the maximum work week) as soon as possible. But he also favors flexible provisions of the Senate bill, which allow sectional living and wage conditions to be taken into consideration before minimum wages are fixed.

Thomas holds that a flexible bill is more likely to be held constitutional and generally wiser legislation. But he already has acceded to the House conferees' demands for rigid statutory minimum wage levels to be fixed flatly by law and to climb a few cents an hour each year to a certain extent—the fixing of a rock-bottom minimum wage

Mexico's Seizure Of Oil Lands Wins Court's Approval

Mexico City, June 7 (AP).—District Judge Manuel Bartlett late today upheld the constitutionality of President Lazaro Cardenas' expropriation of the $400,000,000 foreign-owned oil industry.

His decision denied an injunction asked by the British and American companies whose property was taken over March 18 in a move that resulted in severance of diplomatic relations with Great Britain.

The judge ruled, however, that the Mexican government was at fault in seizing bank deposits, archives, and correspondence of the companies and ordered the cash and records returned.

Ten Democratic Senators Sign Resolution for Inquiry Into All Charges of Politics in Relief

Favor Investigation Into Complaints of WPA Politics

McADOO. A stalwart New Dealer, he voted against previous proposals but favored this one.

GEORGE. He was among those who favored previous efforts to restrict political use of relief funds.

BURKE. "This should prove more effective than former efforts to ban politics in relief."

KING. "I think it wicked and cowardly to coerce people on relief and I fear that has been done."

ADAMS. "I predict the resolution will be adopted. I believe it would discourage political use of relief funds . . ."

BULKLEY. "There ought to be some authority in the Senate ready to examine credibility of charges."

WAGNER. He declined to comment on the resolution, but was one of the ten who signed it.

TYDINGS. "It should supply a strong deterrent against political use of relief funds."

HATCH. "If this fails, I will renew my fight to extend civil service rules . . . to relief employes."

GERRY. He, too, favors a Senate investigation of complaints of politics in relief.

Group Would Sit Through Summer

By Robert C. Albright.

Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

Ten Democratic Senators representing nearly every shade of political thought in the Senate majority yesterday jointly sponsored a Senate resolution empowering a three-man Senate committee to investigate complaints of politics in relief.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, introduced the resolution in the names of all ten following failure of three separate efforts last week to write a legislative ban in the Senate relief bill against use of recovery funds for political purposes.

Three of the signers of the new resolution, including Senator Tydings, voted against one or more of the proposals to write a statutory restriction on political use of relief money. Two others who opposed prior efforts were Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, relief bill manager, and Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, stalwart New Dealer.

Garner Would Name Three.

Adams last night predicted the latest move to register Senate disapproval of "politics in relief" will win Senate approval. Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico sponsor of two earlier efforts to bar spending-lending bill money from primaries and elections, also signed the Tydings resolution. Hatch said he will renew the fight next session if the Marylander's effort fails.

Other co-signers of the resolution were Senators Wagner, of New York; King, of Utah; George, of Georgia; Bulkley, of Ohio; Gerry, of Rhode Island, and Burke, of Nebraska.

The resolution provides for a special committee of three Senators, to be appointed by Vice President Garner, with authority to sit after Congress adjourns, hear complaints, subpena witnesses and documentary evidence and to recommend legislation to the Senate.

To Investigate All Charges.

The committee would investigate any complaints that funds appropriated for relief or work relief have been used for political purposes or any person paid from these funds "is using or has used his official position to intimidate, coerce, or influence any recipient of relief or work relief or any applicant for relief or work relief, in a manner designed to affect the results of any primary, political convention, or election held during the calendar year 1938."

The cost of the investigation, to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate, would be limited to $10,000.

"The committee shall report to the Senate as soon as practicable

Second Lieut. Nathan H. Coddingdon, 28, Los Angeles; Second Lieut. Arthur M. Keppler, 29, Houston, Tex., and Flying Cadet William H. Coneby, 25, Washington, D. C., were killed.

Second Lieut. Frederick M. Thompson, 24, Los Angeles, died eight hours later of injuries received in one of the crashes.

Both crashes, which occurred about six miles apart, involved model 9 basic training type planes which were on routine flights from Randolph Field.

He was a native of Indianapolis and was brought to the District when he was 5 years old. After being graduated from Central High School, he went to the University of Maryland for two years and then transferred to George Washington University's Law School.

On October 15, 1937, he enrolled at the Army Flying School at Randolph Field.

Told 'Go Get Him,' Dog Rescues Boy From Drowning

By the Associated Press.

Rock Hall, Md., June 7.—Bobby Collier, 12, had a temperature of 101 and a new regard for Betsy, his chum's dog, tonight because he was alive and she was a heroine.

It was a story of four boys and a boat—and Betsy—sailing in Rock Hall Creek. A gust of wind whipped the boat suddenly. The craft overturned.

Three boys, Edward and Charles Elburn and Jack Cowperthwaite were swimmers; Bobby, the youngest, was not.

Bobby disappeared, came threshing back to the surface. The three boys were helpless. Then Cowperthwaite spied his pet.

"Go get him, Betsy," he ordered. Betsy went.

A year-and-a-half-old Chesapeake Bay dog, she jumped in, sank her teeth in his clothing and dragged him to shore, 100 yards away.

There Billy DeFord, 16, revived the unconscious boy.

His traveling companion, John C. Griffith, president of the National Phonographic Network, said he thought Mrs. Glenn was en route to Denver, her former home.

Court Bill Foes Hail Gillette's Iowa Triumph

President and Hopkins Move Quickly to Heal Any Party Split.

Senator Guy M. Gillette yesterday received a congratulatory fanfare from high Administration officials on defeat of his so-called New Deal opponent in the Iowa Senatorial primaries as split Democratic forces joined hands to prevent a Republican State victory in the fall.

Even those members of the New Deal inner circle who opposed his nomination joined in the congratulatory chorus, and at the White House President Roosevelt said it was a perfectly good carrying out of a perfectly good system of party Government.

Truly jubilant were the Senate's bloc of court plan opponents. Gillette was the first of their number to run the primary gantlet of New Deal criticism for his hostile court vote. Led by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, they said defeat of Representative Otha D. Wearin was an expression of resentment by Iowa voters against outside interference and a rebuke to New Dealers who opposed Gillette.

Works Progress Administrator Hopkins, foremost of those who indorsed Wearin, said he "sincerely hopes Senator Gillette will be returned to the United States Senate." He said defeat of Wearin showed

Hazen Will Ask $25,000,000 To Build Model Traffic System

By Howard F. Wentworth.

New York, June 7.—Announcing plans for a new highway safety program in Washington Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said here today he would seek legislation to provide the District with a $25,000,000 bond issue in an unprecedented attempt to make the city a national model in traffic control.

Following a 125-mile inspection tour of New York and New Jersey highways, Hazen, accompanied by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of District highways, said the bond issue would be an answer to their "financial prayers" for improvement of Washington traffic conditions.

After his return to Washington from a scheduled four-day inspection trip of New York traffic control methods, Hazen said he would ask Congressional aid in providing Washington with highway safety facilities second to none.

Snake Passenger In Plane Brings Speedy Landing

Ocean View, Va., June 7 (AP).—It was literally a "happy landing" for Reserve Pilot J. W. Haskett and his radioman when they glided to earth as quickly as possible after observing a two-foot snake inside their observation plane.

Lieut. Haskett was incredulous when Private Rosen told him over the earphones, "I've got a snake back here," but when the tan-colored reptile crawled into Haskett's seat it was all he could do to maneuver the plane to a safe landing at Blacksburg.

5 Legislators Named in Conn. Bribery Case

Warrants Accuse Group in Million Dollar Lobby, Fraud.

By the Associated Press.

Hartford, Conn., June 7.—Five bench warrants against present or former members of the General Assembly were issued today by the Superior Court here in connection with lobbying activities which drew the censure of a Waterbury special grand jury investigating the allaged $1,000,000 fraud case in that city.

List of Accused.

They were issued against the following:

Senator Matthew A. Daly, of New Haven, Democrat, former Connecticut WPA administrator.

Former Senator Nathan D. Spiro, of Danbury, Republican, Senate chairman of the public health and safety committee in the 1935 session.

The warrants were issued on the recommendation of State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, who is special prosecutor in the Waterbury municipal affairs grand jury investigation.

Already Held.

Alcorn's action resulted in a situation in which the two State officials in line of direct succession to Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, Connecticut's 76-year-old chief executive, stand accused of grave criminal charges.

Lieut. Gov. Frank Hayes was among 27 men arrested three weeks ago for conspiracy to defraud the city of Waterbury, of which he has been mayor since 1930.

The legislators against whom the bench warrants were issued were accused by the grand jury of accepting stock "gratuities" from former Comptroller Leary of Waterbury for their favorable votes on certain legislation.

WPA White Collar Men Reassured

New York, June 7 (AP).—President Roosevelt, in a letter made public here today, assured organized office workers that a WPA cost limitations on white collar projects would mean no discontinuance of such projects.

Lewis Merrill, general president of the United Office and Professional Workers of America (C. I. O.), said the letter he received was an answer to protests of the union against a WPA ruling limiting per man costs on white collar projects to $1,000 a year.

"I have no intention, nor have I instructed anyone, to discontinue these projects," Mr. Roosevelt wrote. "It has been my hope that some way would be worked out whereby the average annual cost of the projects could be adjusted. We are now engaged in trying to work this out. I am informed by Mr. Harry Hopkins that no one employed on such projects up to this hour has been deprivved of his employment and that provisions have been made for the continuation of these projects."

Harrison Assails New Deal Chiefs

By the United Press.

Chairman Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, widened the rift between himself and President Roosevelt yesterday when he assailed Administration leaders for their failure to consider his bill to provide Federal aid for schools.

ROSS GARRETT.

By Christine Sadler

The gap between scientific accomplishments of the American medical profession and the Nation's social and economic life is gauged by Ross Garrett, director of the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals of Washington.

"Today we have the battle between group health associations and the medical societies—with almost everybody in the country lined up on one side or the other," he says.

When the smoke of this battle clears, Garrett declares from his middle-of-the-road position, the fact will remain that the medical profession does not have the mechanics it needs for getting its services to the people.

But he sees the differences as "of the head, not the heart," and believes an acceptable program can be developed.

300 Doctors Help.

Last year 1 out of every 17 persons in metropolitan Washington received medical aid after being cleared through the Central Admitting Bureau, which is the only service of its kind in the United States and which is made possible through the co-operation of nine private hospitals, the Community Chest and approximately 300 local doctors.

Twenty out of each 100 persons coming to the bureau are able to finance their own medical needs, and merely get aid in budgeting. Some are able to pay nothing and some are able to pay a little. The bureau's job is to learn what they can pay and then see that they get the attention they need—regardless of what it costs.

"It is the community's responsibility to see that all get medical treatment. The person's responsibility after having received the aid, we always stress, is to help others when he is able to do so, he points out.

"Gentleman Farmer."

"We have a trust fund of $27,000 given by former patients. When the soldiers got their bonus you'd be surprised at the number who came in with gifts for the fund."

The work of the bureau extends over the entire Washington metropolitan area. During the first four months of this year 3,224 "hospital days of care" were rendered to patients "cleared" through the bureau from Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Garrett, a native of Idaho, came to Washington in 1934 to be secretary of the health division of the Council of Social Agencies. He devised the plan for the Central Admitting Bureau, which has attracted nation-wide attention.

Since the first of the year Garrett has been a "gentleman farmer" near Warrenton. A cabin on the farm he is now fitting into a laboratory and there will carry on his work in chemistry and bacteriology. He is particularly interested in development of an "oil" that can be used in treatment of tuberculosis.

Norris Asks Federal Ownership of Dams and Reservoirs in Flood Control Bill.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, yesterday announced action designed to provide Federal ownership of dams and reservoirs authorized in the $375,000,000 flood control bill already passed by the House. A hot Senate fight is expected to result. Norris said he would introduce amendments to the flood control measure that would provide 100 per cent Federal payment for dams and reservoirs and give the Federal Power Commission, rather than Army engineers, authority to determine whether power production at such structures is feasible.

The House Agriculture Committee approved a bill which would direct the Agriculture Department to fix next year's wheat acreage at not less than 52,000,000 acres. The 1938 acreage is about 79,700,000 acres.

Committee members said that under formula written into the new farm act last February the acreage would have been between 45,000,000 and 50,000,000 next year.

Thus, with present prospects for the second largest winter wheat crop on record and a normal spring wheat crop, growers would be required to reduce planting in order to be eligible for maximum benefit payments.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in a minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Court Bill Foes Jubilant Over Gillette Victory

Iowa

WPA was not playing politics. He added that "the repeated reminders I gave to WPA workers that they were to vote as they pleased were not disregarded, as some predicted they would be."

At the White House, President Roosevelt defended Hopkins' right to express himself in favor of Wearin prior to the primaries (for which the WPA administrator was severely criticized in the Senate).

The President described the agitation as a great deal of smoke, and said dispatches criticizing WPA influence in politics were written for the purpose of pleasing newspaper owners. He declared every citizen had the same prerogative. If he, like Hopkins, had been born in Iowa and had gone to college there, the President said he would have felt absolutely free to express his views on the primary.

Roosevelt Son Wires.

As returns from all of Iowa's 2,447 precincts gave Gillette 82,142 votes to Wearin's 41,955, the President's son James, who had called Wearin "my friend," wired congratulations to Gillette. The President said he would see the Senator on his return.

Gillette made public the following wire from the President's son: "May I send you my sincere congratulations on your victory and express earnest hope that all will unite to bring you another overwhelming victory in November."

Postmaster General Farley, who throughout the bitter contest had continued mute, also wired "heartiest congratulations" and offered Gillette "any assistance you desire." Farley said "you have every reason to be proud of the splendid outcome, which is evidence of the esteem which the people of your State have for you."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, an Iowan, who had resisted pressure in some New Deal quarters to swing his support to Wearin, offered "wholehearted support" to Gillette.

"I hope all Democrats and all Republicans who favor the President's policies will now devote their earnest efforts toward re-electing you," Wallace wired the Senator. "For Iowa to send Lester Dickinson back to Washington would be a calamity so far as all legislation for agriculture and all other progressive measures are concerned and would misrepresent the sentiment of Iowa people."

Dickinson, former Republican Senator and bitter New Deal critic, was running up a vote of 149,595 to 109,337 in the Republican primaries over Representative Lloyd Thurston.

Senator Minority Leader McNary, Assistant House Minority Leader Martin and other Republican leaders declared the large Iowa Republican turnout spells victory for Dickinson in November. Martin said "the voting indicated plainly that Iowa is set to join with Pennsylvania in the Republican parade in November."

Hamilton Encouraged.

From Republican National Committee headquarters came a statement by Chairman John Hamilton that "those whose faith in the future of American democracy has been gravely disturbed by recent events should take comfort and encouragement out of the results of the Iowa primary returns.

"Had the President's left-hand adviser, Thomas Corcoran; his son James, and his relief administrator, Harry Hopkins, remained out of the Iowa fight, Mr Wearin might have made a better showing," said Hamilton. "His crushing defeat is a well merited rebuke to the Roosevelt Administration for its shameless attempt to play politics with relief."

Hamilton pointed to the large Republican vote, doubling Democratic returns in Iowa, and asked "those who say this is without significance, because the same thing happened in 1936, to remember that Senator Herring was elected over Senator Dickinson by a margin of only 35,000 votes out of more than 1,000,000 cast in that year of a great Democratic victory."

At the Capitol, Senator Herring, who had backed his colleague in the primaries, said the Republican primary vote had little significance and predicted victory for Gillette in November. He said the large Republican vote was attributable to the fact that 75 per cent of Iowa's counties are Republican, and Republican contests for local office are keen.

Commenting at Cherokee, Iowa, on the outcome, Senator Gillette said his victory "will give that left wing group, which started out to control the party nomination in 1940 a very great incentive to stop and think things over." Gillette said his candidacy had become "a symbol of resentment against a well-planned attempt by a group outside the State to dictate to Iowa Democrats whom they should send to Washington. This plan would have subverted the constitutional right of a people to be represented in Congress by those of their own choosing."

Conceding defeat, Wearin wired Gillette: "Congratulations, Guy. Extend my best recards to Rose (Mrs. Gillette), and Mark (Gillette's son)."

Senate court plan opponents, many of whom are facing opposition by New Deal candidates, viewed the outcome as a sharp slap at efforts to "purge" the party of independent voters.

"The people of Iowa," said Senator Wheeler, "evidently resented the back-seat drivers here telling them how they should vote. This same group attempted to pack the court and failed, and now it has failed in an effort to pack the Senate. Men who are working for WPA evidently didn't follow instructions. Apparently they resent being regarded as feudal slaves."

Ten Democrats Ask Senatorial Relief Inquiry

the results of the investigations, together with its recommendations, if any, for necessary legislation," the resolution provides.

Shift of three Senators who opposed statutory restrictions on politics in relief to support of the Tydings resolution apparently overcame the narrow margin by which the Hatch amendment to the relief bill was defeated.

Efforts to curb political use of spending-lending bill funds followed declaration by Works Progress Administrator Hopkins last week that if he was an Iowa voter he would vote for Representative Otha D. Wearin in his primary race to unseat Senator Guy M. Gillette.

Barkley Aided Defeat.

The Hopkins declaration precipitated a tempest of condemnation in the Senate, where Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, charged Hopkins was "playing politics with human misery."

Later Hatch offered a resolution to extend civil service rules against political activity to officials of the WPA, PWA and all others paid out of spending-lending bill funds. It was defeated, 40 to 37, after Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Senate's Administration leader, vigorously opposed it. Barkley, opposed for re-election by Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky, charged relief workers would be "tied" while State employés could play politics "to their hearts content."

Senator Burke called for reconsideration of the vote, declaring the Senate virtually had "given a green light" to political spending of relief funds. Again the Hatch plan was defeated, that time by a margin of 33 to 32.

Hatch Plan Extended.

A more drastic limitation was proposed by Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, providing jail sentences and fines for political misuse of relief money. It too was rejected, 35 to 33.

Tydings, after taking the floor to declare relief and other Government officials who oppose Senators for re-election ought to be "rooted out," voted against the Hatch amendment.

He explained yesterday that the Hatch proposal, as amended on the floor, applied only to administrative officials. He said his resolution introduced yesterday would apply alike to officials and employes and supply a Senate committee medium for enforcing the ban.

President Backs Hopkins.

Tydings is up for re-election this fall, and a New Deal opponent, Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, recently announced against him after leaving the White House. Opponents running on a "100 per cent" New Deal platform have also announced against George and Adams.

The resolution was introduced as President Roosevelt at a White House press conference defended Hopkins for expressing his views in the Iowa contest, saying that if he had been born and educated in Iowa he would have felt free to do the same thing.

At the same press conference, the President warned communities seeking PWA grants that their chances of receiving allotments will be endangered by employing attorneys or representatives to "lobby" their cause. PWA officials earlier had issued a similar warning.

Roosevelt Hits Lobbyists.

The President said it is erroneous for communities to suppose they should hire lawyers or other paid representatives to seek PWA aid. Instead, he said, it was natural for the Government to look askance at such applications. He said communities make the most favorable impression by applying directly to the Government for Federal funds.

As conferees on the huge spending-lending bill prepared to meet for the first time tomorrow, a controversy was brewing second only to the wage-hour bill deadlock in its threat to the leadership's early adjournment plans.

House conferees have decided to oppose $212,000,000 in parity payments for farmers added to the relief bill by the Senate without hearings, and other Senate changes in the House relief measure.

Adams Strikes Back.

Chairman Adams, of the Senate conferees, yesterday struck back at the House conference group. He said it was "a little unusual for conferees to make public such a decision in advance of a conference."

The Coloradan indicated the Senate group will demand that House conferees take the Senate bill to the House for a vote, before they will assent to prolonged hearings on the farm section of the relief bill.

"And you know what will happen if they do that," Adams added.

As echoes of the Iowa primaries died away, the "politics in relief" tempest it inspired was brought again to life by the Tydings move.

Wide Support Seen.

The resolution was expected to draw support from other Administration Senators of Wagner-McAdoo caliber, who are not ready to concede that relief funds are being used for political purposes, but believe the Senate should at least register disapproval of such practices, if they exist.

Typical of this sentiment were the views of Senator Bulkley.

"A lot of irresponsible charges (about political bias in relief administration) are being made, and it's difficult for the public to know whether any of the charges are credible," said Bulkley.

"There ought to be some authority in the Senate ready to examine the credibility of charges and recommend some form of action if they prove true."

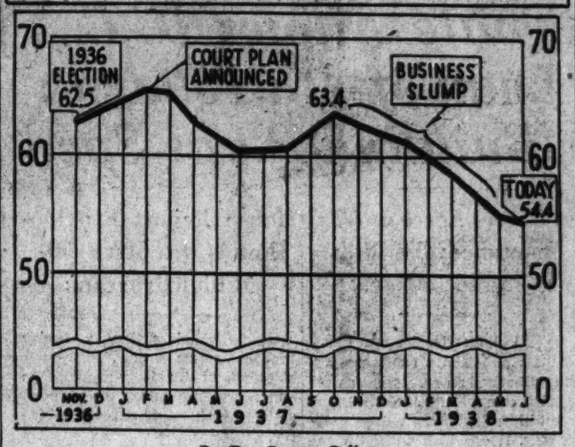
The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt's Popularity Loss Is Greatest in Upper Income Groups, Special Survey Shows.



By Dr. George Gallup,

Director American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 7.—During the last eight months President Roosevelt's popularity, as measured by surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion has dropped nine points, from 63.4 per cent to 54.4 per cent—one of the sharpest declines in four years. To determine what types of voters have deserted him during this period and for what reasons, the Institute has just completed a special analysis among a representative cross-section of the 4,000,000 persons whom the Institute estimates have turned against the President since last October.

George Gallup.

The analysis reveals:

1. The greatest rate of shift away from Roosevelt is among voters who have the most income, while the lowest rate of shift is among those who have the least.

2. The chief reasons which voters give for their change in attitude are:

Opposition to the spending policy.
The President's "hostile" attitude toward business.
Failure of the New Deal to improve business conditions.
A feeling that the President is seeking too much power.
The Administration has not kept its promises.

According to previous Institute surveys, the President never did have the support of a majority of voters in the upper income levels. Today, as the following table shows, he is still losing voters in the upper brackets.

Per Cent for Roosevelt.

	Oct. 1937	To-day	P. C. Change
Average	58	48	—17
Poor	70	61	—12
On Relief	86	80	— 7

The fact that the rate of shift is highest in the upper levels indicates that the division of political sentiment between the "haves" and "have nots" is growing sharper than ever.

The Institute made a special tabulation of comments from the voters who are still for Roosevelt and who comprise a majority (54.4 per cent) of the electorate. They gave two main reasons for their continued loyalty. The first was "he may have made mistakes, but he's trying his best," and the second was "he's helped the common man." Ballots from the lower income groups were studded with such comments as:

"He's trying to give everybody a chance for a living . . . He's helped the working man . . . He fed us and gave us clothes when we lost our jobs."

What America thinks about some of its medical problems, including group medical insurance, Government medical care, and medical costs, will be found in Sunday's Gallup Poll.

Bolt Is Averted In Conference On Wage Bill of 25 cents an hour and a second-year standard of 30 cents.

The Southerners, who include Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, a House conferee, insists that the "upper end be left open"—in other words, that no time limit be fixed as a specific date on which 40 cents an hour becomes the statutory country-wide minimum wage.

Pressure was laid on Thomas all day yesterday by both sides. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor personally exhorted Thomas at length to declare for a time limit. Southerners pleaded with him for an "open upper end," on the basis that 40 cents an hour, even in seven years, will constitute an unfair burden on their low-wage industries and low-living cost communities.

"Blacklist" Provided.

A measure of even more vital importance to organized labor, and of major importance to industry generally, the amended version of the Walsh-Healey Government contracts act passed the Senate swiftly early in the day.

The bill, now before the Rules Committee of the House, changes the present act's limit of $10,000 to $2,000. Previously, all firms doing more than $10,000 business with the Government in one year had to observe minimum-wage and maximum-hour standards set by the Secretary of Labor. Besides the reduction to $2,000, a flat 40-hour week would be set, with wages as before.

One of the measure's most significant provisions is the setting-up of a "black-list" of firms which have violated the act and all those which have been or may be disobedient to any order of the National Labor Relations Board. All firms on the list automatically are barred for three years from receiving Government contracts.

Compromise Reported.

This provision strikes directly and heavily at such corporations as Remington-Rand, Inc., often adjudged in violation of NLRB orders and even now considered a violator. This firm has done millions of dollars of business with the Government heretofore.

On the wage-hour situation, it was first believed yesterday that the Norton compromise had been favorably acted upon by both groups of conferees. This compromise, proposed by the House Labor Committee chairman, Representative Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, would operate much the same as the Walsh amendment, which would step up wages 2½ cents a year for two years, and then 2 cents a year for five years.

Harlan Deputy Slew Brother, Witness Says

By the United Press.

London, Ky., June 7.—The Government offered it first testimony today that Harlan County deputy sheriffs resorted to murder in their fight against unionism in the Kentucky soft coal field.

Jasper Clouse, testifying in the conspiracy trial of 19 coal corportions and 44 individuals, swore that Bill Lewis, one of the 22 Harlan deputies on trial here, killed his brother, Lloyd Clouse, an organizer for the United Mine Workers.

He said the killing occurred April 24, 1937. He swore that his brother never had a chance to defend himself.

Earlier, 14-year-old John Clouse dangled his feet from the witness chair and swore that he saw Lee Hubbard, another deputy, on a hill near Verda, Ky., when two automobiles filled with union organizers were fired upon and Tom Ferguson, one of the union men, was wounded in the shoulder.

The Clouse boy said he had gone looking for scrap iron with his brother, Jasper, and his uncle Markham, when they came across a man sitting in an automobile beside the highway. He told them to mind their own business, the boy said, and then blew blasts on an automobile horn. Immediately two cars that came along the highway were spattered with rifle bullets from a cliff. Then, according to the Clouse boy, Lee Hubbard came down from the cliff and told them to "get along before you get shot."

Markham Clouse, John's uncle, told substantially the same story.

Ted Clark, a United Mine Workers' organizer, testified he was in one of the cars that was fired upon.

D. C. Auditorium Bill Strikes Snag For This Session

Chances for passage of a bill to build a $9,000,000 Washington auditorium on a portion of the municipal center site faded yesterday as Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, objected to it when reached on the consent calendar.

Unless Ellender withdraws his objections, the bill is likely to die with the adjournment of Congress. Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, indicated he would reintroduce it at the next session.

The auditorium was proposed originally to provide a place for indoor Presidential inauguration ceremonies in inclement weather. The District agreed to contribute the site, for which it paid close to $2,000,000, as its share of the project.

Senator Ellender said he might not object if the money could be obtained from the Public Works Administration.

Frank, as Author, Urges Mill Codes

By the United Press.

Securities and Exchange Commissioner Jerome N. Frank last night joined the growing list of New Deal authors with publication of his book, "Save America First," in which he suggests establishment of a supercode authority to achieve balance between industries and "end industrial sabotage."

Frank said the council would be made up of representatives of Government and of several interests in each industry.

Coding of industries would be limited to the few mass-production industries, and no monopolies would be permitted except in those industries where social benefits would result from integration.

Co-ordinatel increased production and lowered prices over a wide area of industry would then be made possible, Frank wrote.

11 Die, 3,442 Hurt In Va. Industrial Mishaps in Month

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—Eleven persons were fatally injured and 3,442 others hurt in Virginia industries last month, the State Industrial Commission reported today.

Both deaths and injuries were fewer last month than during the same month last year, the report said. In May, 1937, there were 15 deaths and 3,888 injuries.

As usual, most of the occupational injuries resulted from the handling of objects, there being 316 such cases. There were 195 injuries caused by slipping on or crashing against objects, and 158 from falls.

The commission estimated that the total hours of work in manufacturing was 26 per cent less last month than in May, 1937, and in commercial enterprises 13 per cent less.

Hazen Will Seek 25 Million for D.C. Traffic Program

Traffic

establish itself as a model for the entire country. The only way I see to adequately handle our traffic problem is to spend money. The bond issue seems the best way."

The day-long trip through a maze of elevated and divided parkways connecting New York City, Long Island and New Jersey, was an "education," Hazen said. He expressed a desire to invite members of the House and Senate Appropriations committees to take the same tour later this year.

"It would be an excellent way to focus Congressional attention on the distressing needs of the District," Hazen declared.

Among the Commissioner's proposals to relieve Washington traffic congestion and promote highway safety is a by-pass for trucks and tourist travel skirting the city limits. Funds for this, he said, would be provided by the suggested bond issue.

Would Curb Accidents.

The proposed by-pass, a "definite need" if Washington is to curb its accident and death toll, would start in Alexandria and connect with the Defense Highway and Baltimore Boulevard through Southeast and Northeast sections of the city, Hazen said.

He proposed also to make the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway a divided thoroughfare from a point just south of Massachusetts avenue to the District line. The highway divisions, under Hazen's proposed plan, would run along the banks of Rock Creek.

"After seeing what New York and New Jersey have done," the commissioner said, "I am convinced that divided highways (roads with a parkway through the center) and separated grades are the principal answers to our problem of saving lives."

For Horse-Mounted Police.

Leaving the Hotel New Yorker shortly after 9 a. m., Hazen and his party were escorted by New York officials and representatives of the Portland Cement Association over a 125-mile stretch of modernized roadways. The tour passed the New York World's Fair site, where scientific highway improvements have been made to safeguard the thousands of tourists expected next year.

During the trip through Manhattan, the District officials were impressed with the efficiency of New York's horse-mounted traffic squad. Hazen revealed he had made repeated attempts in the past to secure such a squad for Washington, but that Budget Bureau officials had eliminated his proposal.

The Commissioner said he would renew appeals for a horse-mounted traffic unit in the District when the 1939 budget is submitted in September.

Among those contributing to the program were Mrs. John E. Briggs, wife of the host church's pastor who spoke on "The Home Beautiful;" Mrs. B. B. Alsop, president of the union; Mrs. George Ross, president of the Women's Baptist Association of the District; Mrs. Elizabeth Willis, and Mrs. J. H. Ingram.

Francis Biddle Weighed as TVA Inquiry Counsel

Francis Biddle, Philadelphia attorney and former chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, is under consideration for the position of chief counsel to the Congressional Tennessee Valley Investigating Committee, it was revealed yesterday by Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio. Biddle served as head of the labor board from November 16, 1934, to July 5, 1935.

Others who have been mentioned for the post, among some 60 applicants, are Judge Samuel Seabury, of New York, and C. Roy Smith, head of the public utilities division of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The committee, meeting yesterday, delayed decision on selection of counsel. Members, said, however, they probably would ask Congress for an additional $100,000 to pay expenses of the inquiry. The original appropriation was $50,000.

34 Ministers Given Sanction By Adventists

Fund Campaign Received $28,089, Report at Parley Reveals.

Credentials and licensse were voted 34 ministers of the Seventh Day Adventist Church at the Potomac Conference's eighth session of its ten-day camp meeting in Takoma Park, Md., yesterday.

Papers will be given to 16 ordained ministers, 11 licensed ministers and 7 missionary ministers within the next few days. The Rev. John W. MacNeil, president of the conference, and the Rev. J. E. Johnson, the Rev. L. J. Pryor, C. H. Kelley and Frank Smith were elected a committee to head the 600 colored Adventists in the nine churches of the conference.

Home Mission Work.

A report from the Rev. J. H. Smith, pastor of the Norfolk Adventist Church, showed that in the last two years 990,000 pieces of literature have been distributed by members as a part of the home mission work.

There are 21 dorcas societies, or women's groups, which help the needy, according to the report. It said that 11 churches have begun a new system of training its laymen. The course of study teaches laymen the Bible doctrine and how to give Bible readings in homes.

A gain of $11,000 in the Harvest Ingathering Campaign was made in 1937. In 1936, the report showed, the Ingathering and educational fund campaigns received $26,800, while in 1937 they totaled $28,089.

Educational Rally.

The Rev. F. B. Jensen spoke at the morning devotion, continuing a talk on the development of the church.

An educational rally featured the afternoon program. The Rev. A. O. Dart, educational secretary of the Potomac Conference, was in charge. The speakers included the Rev. W. B. Hill, Mrs. S. W. Tymeson, Mrs. S. B. Jensen, the Rev. C. P. Sorenson, the latter being in charge of the young people's department of the Columbia Union.

The work of the Adventists through Europe was explained to a large throng last night by the Rev. Steen Rasmussen, associate secretary of th home missions department of the general conference. The Rev. Rasmussen gave interesting accounts of his tour of nearly five months through Europe.

Kidnaping Victim Identifies Couple

Two men arrested early yesterday by Fredericksburg (Va.) police, were identified at Police Headquarters last night by William A. Ostmann, 42-year-old Washington salesman, as the pair who "kidnaped" him at Fourteenth and Water streets northwest Monday.

Held at the First Precinct, the men gave their names as Mosco Parker, 23, of Texas, and Morgan Jones, 30, of Scranton, Pa.

According to police, they admitted holding up Ostmann, of Montrose, Md., a salesman for Auth Brothers, meat dealers, and forcing him to drive to Arlington County, where they took his car.

Manila, June 7 (AP).—Socialists in the town of Arayat, Pampanga Province, decided Monday to appeal to President Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt, United States High Commissioner, to halt what they termed the "dictatorial activities" of President Manuel L. Quezon. The action concerned labor and tenant unrest.

Earlier Carciso Lapus, Socialist leader, sent a radio message to Representative Thomas O'Malley (Democrat, Wisconsin), urging Congressional intervention to quiet the trouble in central Luzon Island.

He said an amicable agreement had been reached by the couple, married two and one-half years ago.

Jersey City Files 'Doctored,' C. I. O. Aide Tells Court

Newark, N. J., June 7 (AP).—Morris L. Ernst, counsel for the C. I. O. and American Civil Liberties Union in their "free speech" injunction suit against Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, told Federal Judge William Clark today he suspected the city's records concerning permits for public speeches might have been "doctored."

The records were produced by Public Safety Director Daniel Casey.

Contradicting Casey's testimony that no applications to give street speeches had been refused before 1936 (when the C. I. O. was starting its drive), Ernst said a permit was refused for a peace meeting in 1933 and later for a speech by Senator William E. Borah. "Catholic workers," Ernst said, were given the "run-around" when they sought a meeting permit.

Protests Follow Austrian Default

London, June 7 (AP).—British and French trustees of 1933-34 loans to Austria today lodged a strong protest in Berlin against nonpayment of monthly interest installments due June 1.

Britain, France, Italy and other European countries are guarantors of the capital and interest of the loans, but it is understood Italy did not sign today's protest.

The Bank for International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland, announced today it had protested to Germany against failure to pay interest due June 1 on a 1930 Austrian government loan for which the bank acts as trustee.

Clipper's First Trial.

Seattle, June 7 (AP).—The Boeing clipper, 42-ton flying boat built for transoceanic service, took off from Puget Sound late today for its test flight. The craft, piloted by Edmund T. Allen, landed a half hour later on Lake Washington.

U. S. Aviators Told Not to Fly In Rebel Forces

Roosevelt Says Licenses Forfeit if Fliers Fight for Revolutions.

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday warned American airplane pilots that they face cancelation of their licenses if they participate in revolutions against recognized governments.

The Chief Executive apparently referred to American fliers who have joined the insurgent armies in Spain and others who are said to be aiding a nebulous rebel movement in Mexico.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized at a press conference that the proposed crusade would not extend to pilots who take service with recognized foreign governments in wars with other governments.

The President's wrath was said to have been aroused by the fact that during the past few weeks two airplanes have been flown into Mexico for Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, leader of an abortive revolt.

No export licenses were obtained for the ships, it was said, and one reportedly was flown by a well-known American pilot.

Senate Allows Improvement Loan for D. C.

Commission. The House bill carried a provision which would have enabled an association of cab owners to file a $75,000 bond while requiring a straight-out insurance policy of independents. The Senate placed all operators on the same plane, with no bond or cash deposit allowed.

Zoning Bill to Return.

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, asked that a bill to transfer liens on autos from the recorder of deeds' office to the department of vehicles and traffic go over. Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, a member of the District Committee, explained that the only opposition to the bill came from William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds. Thompkins was appointed to his post from Missouri.

The zoning bill, although it has passed the House, will have to return for concurrence in Senate amendments or else be sent to conference.

Other measures passed by the Senate which had been approved previously in the House propose:

Exemption of the Y. W. C. A. from local and national taxation.

Liquor Act Changed.

Amendment of the ABC act to allow railroads to obtain blanket liquor licenses for dining and club cars.

Continuation by law of a vending stand at the District Jail.

Incorporation of the Washington College of Law.

Viaduct Postponed.

Postponement for two years of the building of a viaduct at New York avenue, Brentwood road and T street northeast.

Senate bills which have not been acted on by the House, other than the PWA act amendment, which is on the House calendar, proposed:

Modernization of the District tax collection and assessment machinery in accordance with recommendations of a select committee of District officials and citizens. (This is on the House calendar.)

Amendment of the District code to permit local trust companies to reduce their capital by curtailing the value of their shares of stock as well as the number.

An agreement to permit suburban Maryland towns to tap the District water line in fighting fires.

Elinor Dodd Heads Dental Hygienists

Miss Elinor Dodd last night succeeded Miss Kathleen Cates as president of the District Dental Hygienist Association, in the annual banquet of the group, held at the Hotel Harrington.

Installed with Miss Dodd were Miss Elizabeth Zoll, vice president; Miss Lillian Cain, recording secretary; Miss Vivian Frederick, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Vivian Frederick, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Virginia Allen, treasurer.

Plans were announced for a picnic for members of the association and their friends, to be held June 19 at South River Heights, Md.

Zoo's Mystery Chickens and Successor to Bear's Victim

Post Staff Photos.

The odd brace of birds are the first of their kind at the Zoo and are believed to be the hybrid offsprings of a Rhode Island Red rooster and a white guinea hen. They have red feathers and the heavy body of ordinary chickens but from their guinea hen ancestry they drew black legs, white wing feathers and a squeaky voice. The peacock, who was adamant about spreading his tail feathers, enjoys a day of freedom after being shut up for two weeks while he became accustomed to his new surroundings. He succeeds the peacock killed by a polar bear three weeks ago.

Zoo Has Penguin Egg Blast

Any expectations Mollie and Moe may have had of soon gaining fame as parents of the first baby penguins to survive birth in captivity have been blasted, literally.

The two eggs on which each alternately has been sitting since early in May have exploded.

Fortunately, neither Mollie or Moe was setting at the time because Malcolm Davis, keeper of the Zoo bird house, who has learned more about penguin eggs from reading books than most penguins know from personal experience, had removed the eggs.

"I was afraid the eggs hadn't been fertilized," explained Davis yesterday. "They were supposed to hatch in 40 days and there had been no sign of activity."

"The explosions occurred Sunday. They weren't particularly forceful, the eggs merely popping because they had become spoiled and filled with gas," Davis said.

mended $3,000,000 for a start on this.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved a bill authorizing the District Commissioners to borrow $18,150,000 from the Public Works Administration for municipal construction. The PWA loan would be obtained on the same basis as loans to States; that is, 45 per cent an outright grant and 55 per cent a loan.

The prospect is that at least $5,000,000 of this sum will be spent on new District schools. Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of schools, has submitted a program to cost that much which could get under way by January 1.

$500,000 for Memorial.

The House Appropriations Committee, besides recommending a start on the War Department and Social Security Buildings, wrote these items in the deficiency bill:

For the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, $500,000.

For an additional story on the wings of the Navy Department Building on Constitution avenue, $210,000. Ultimately, the Navy will have a new building, located between the Navy Hospital and the Potomac River. Thus it will be only a couple of blocks from the proposed War Department Building.

For a design for the Smithsonian Gallery of Art, $40,000. The gallery itself will be built by private subscription at a cost of $4,500,000.

For improvements at the Washington Navy Yard, $1,585,000.

For continuation of the slum-clearance program of the Alley Dwelling Authority, $1,000,000. This is in addition to the money which the ADA will borrow under another bill before Congress.

For a rifle range at Quantico, Va., for the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, $150,000. Up until now the G-men have been using the Marines' range.

For a park extension and flood-control program in Prince Georges County, $300,000. The money would be expanded by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

For completing the Navy's model testing basin at Carderock, Md., $500,000.

Funds for Training School.

Funds to continue the National Training School for Girls and the Children's Receiving Home were recommended by the House Appropriations Committee yesterday in reporting the second deficiency bill. The amount recommended for the two institutions was $89,000.

The bill also included $101,175 for additional salaries necessitated by the 1939 District revenue act; $10,000 for an investigation of District relief and taxes; $141,860 for payment to the United States for support of convicts in Federal prisons and local inmates of St. Elizabeths Hospital; $189,500 above Budget Bureau estimates for the District's contribution to continue a WPA project for 2,000 women.

The various District supplemental and deficiency appropriations amounted to $832,847. They will dig deeply into the anticipated 1939 surplus, but they will cause no deficit.

Dr. Walsh Spurns Communist Bid as Step 'to Choke Us'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, June 7.—Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, emphatically rebuffing the bid of Earl Browder for Catholic support of a Communist fight for social justice, declared today, "he would embrace us the better to choke us."

In delivering the commencement address to the graduating class of the University of Detroit tonight, Dr. Walsh denounced the "hypocrisy" of the Communist leader. Dr. Walsh was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws at exercises at the Detroit Masonic temple.

The Communist bid to which he referred was extended at the Communist national convention in New York City a week ago, when the American people were invited to accept communism as the best safeguard of democracy. Dr. Walsh recalled that "the American spokesman for Mr. Stalin singled out the Catholic Church for special mention and conciliation."

Billy Alters Plea, Tells His Story, Wins Freedom

A timely change of plea in Police Court yesterday saved William Dawson, 23, colored, from what might have been a lengthy jail term.

William originally pleaded guilty to the charge of assaulting Evelyn Ferguson in her room at 615 Gresham place northwest last Saturday. He listened to Evelyn's story of how he had stabbed her and threatened to cut her head off, but when he stood up to receive sentence he told Judge Walter J. Casey he had intended to plead not guilty.

William was given a few minutes to prepare his case, then reappeared with a lawyer, two witnesses and a flatiron. He explained that he had cut Evelyn in self-defense only after she had thrown the iron, a ginger ale bottle, a liquor bottle, a vase and a clock at him.

Judge Casey dismissed the case.

Note Threatening Puppy Here Stirs A Federal Inquiry

A postcard threatening the life of a small ppuppy was being investigated yesterday by a postal inspector at the request of Assistant U. S. Attorney David A. Hart.

Patrick Fitzgibbons, 12, of 5224 Chevy Chase parkway, owner of "Blackie," a brown-and-tan terrier, received the note, which said: "If you wish to avoid trouble keep your dog home, as he annoys the neighbors." The note was anonymous.

Grandson of Daniel Garges, former secretary of District Commissioner, Patrick was bewildered. He said he could not understand how his little dog could annoy anyone.

Hart, whose son's dog was poisoned last January, wants the writer apprehended and given the maximum penalty.

Reformed Church Synod Bans Evangelic Union

Asbury Park, N. J., June 7 (AP).—The general synod of the Reformed Church of America turned down today a proposal looking toward organic union of the Reformed and Evangelical Churches of America.

The delegates at the 132d annual session voted to accept a committee report rejecting the move by the Albany (N. Y.) synod for a study of the possibility and need for the union.

Pierotti, Former Post Cartoonist, Misses Starlings

John E. Pierotti, crack cartoonist, missed the starlings when he came back to Washington yesterday for the first time in four years, but he's finding plenty of material for his drafting board in WPA and other new Government agencies.

He also thinks wedded life will furnish him some ideas for cartoons. He was married to Helen Mastrangelo at a ceremony in Bkooklyn Sunday.

Johnnie drew cartoons for The Washington Post from 1931 to 1934, contributing almost daily to the sports page and occasionally illustrating news stories. The starling situation kept him busy for months, he remembers.

He now works for the United Features Syndicate in New York City and is a frequent contributor to magazines.

7 Union Leaders Deny Racketeering

New York, June 7 (AP).—Seven officers and delegates of Local 807, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, pleaded not guilty today to an indictment charging racketeering in the trucking industry.

William Campbell and Austin Fuery, delegates, were held in $15,000 bail each, while bail of $5,000 each was fixed for William Devery, president of the local; Thomas L. Rickey, secretary-treasurer; John Flaherty, trustee, and Thomas Clerke and Thomas Kehoe, trustees.

The indictment was returned last week by a Federal grand jury against the local, eight of its officers, 62 members of the local and six outsiders termed gangsters by Special Prosecutor John Harlan Amen.

Seville Reports Counter-Revolt Against Franco

Spain

attacking Italian and German "intervention." Thirty were said to have been executed there Sunday.

Unrest at La Linea was reported by the loyalists to have caused postponement of the unveiling of a monument to the late Gen. Emilio Mola because insurgent authorities feared that the arrival of special trains from all parts of insurgent-held Spain might bring further disorders.

Executions continued in Seville, Algeciras, Cadiz and other insurgent centers in the south, reports said, as result of wholesale arrests largely brought about by German intelligence operatives.

A traveler reaching Gibraltar from Cadiz, where Italian Black Shirt Legionnaires and war supplies are disembarked, reported the city was "deathlike" with streets virtually deserted except for armed patrols.

The aerial bombardments of loyalist cities along the Mediterranean east cost, including Barcelona, Alicente and Valencia, with enormous civilian death tolls and the constant threat of international complications as result of the sinking of British and French merchant ships, was said by usually reliable sources to have been responsible in part for the nationalist dissension behind the lines.

Daladier Goes to "Front."

Perpignan, France, June 7 (AP).—Premier Daladier completed an inspection of French defenses on the Spanish frontier today and ordered artillery and air forces to shoot down any plane which again threatened French territory.

The strength of France's land and air forces at southern centers like Narbes and Montpellier within a few hours of the border is estimated at about 60,000 men.

Of these troops only a few thousand antiaircraft and aviation units are actually within sight of the frontier where reinforcements were rushed after bombers of "unknown nationality" from Spain thrice attacked French communities.

Besides regular army contingents in the vicinity, about 1,500 mobile guardsmen patrol the eastern half of the border alone.

Britain May Send Ships.

London, June 7 (U.P.).—The British government tonight discussed a plan to dispatch warships to Spanish waters with orders to shoot down any bombing planes molesting British shipping.

The warlike proposal was advanced at an emergency meeting of foreign office and defense chiefs after word reached London of the bombing of the 3,072-ton British freighter Thurston in Valencia harbor today by a squadron of raiding nationalist planes.

The bombing of the Thurston brought to 41 the number of attacks on British shipping since the outbreak of the Spanish civil war nearly two years ago. A loss of 43 lives aboard the ships resulted.

The foreign office, dissatisfied with Gen. Franco's explanations and remies to repeated protests, reported to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain that several of the attacks appeared to have been "deliberate."

Two other proposals were known to be under discussion. They were: Recall of the British agent to insurgent Spain, Sir Robert Hodgson, thereby breaking off formal relations with the Franco regime.

Direct "retaliation" whereby Spanish insurgent ships would be seized to offset the loss of every British merchantman.

Rome Denies Rift.

Rome, June 7 (U.P.).—Fascist officials tonight denied reports of dissension between Italian Blackshirts and Spanish insurgent factions as the press defended the aerial bombardments of loyalist east coast cities as aimed at military objectives.

"Franco-Soviet supplies to Red Spain continue and it is just and necessary that the nationalists intervene, since Europe does not intervene," said Virginia Gayda, editor of the Giornale d'Italia.

"The bases of these supplies are, above all, Barcelona, Tarragona and Valencia."

Advance on Seaport.

Hendaye, France, June 7 (AP).—The spearhead of Gen. Franco's insurgent infantrymen smashed through government defense lines in Castellon Province today to enter the broad river valley leading to Castellon de la Plana, important government seaport.

Insurgent dispatches said a Galician column had captured the village of Adzeneta, 18 miles from Castellon.

Three separate columns were moving down small valleys eastward toward Castellon.

Planes Bomb Coast.

Barcelona (Wednesday), June 8 (U.P.).—Insurgent warplanes continued more than 24 hours of almost constant bombardment of loyalist east coast towns today with two attacks on Barcelona, bringing the toll of dead to at least 172 and the wounded to more than 400.

Gen. Franco's bombers first appeared over the loyalist capital here at 11:30 last night, killing 15 persons and wounding many others.

Three British merchant ships were damaged in the series of raids which spread from Barcelona southward along the coast to Alicante. The Thurston was struck by a bomb in Valencia Harbor. The Thorpehaven was struck at Alicante, where another British steamer was reported to have been damaged.

Thirty-two persons, including women and children, were killed at Alicante and more than 100 wounded.

Abandonment of the village by government troops, insurgent dispatches said, left the way open to the "River of the Widow," a stream running through a low fertile valley south of Castellon.

The insurgent advances were part of a new offensive that swung east from the Tereul-Valecnia highway, with Valencia as the ultimate objective.

Franco Brands "Smugglers."

Burgos, Spain (Wednesday), June 8 (U.P.).—The insurgent government of Gen. Franco, in a press note today concerning bombing of foreign ships in loyalist ports, charged that all ships appearing in enemy ports "are no more than common smugglers."

Amtorg Protests Paying Of U. S. Income Taxes

By the Associated Press.

The Amtorg Trading Corporation, commercial representative of the Russian government, protested yesterday against paying $46,186 in American Federal income taxes, telling the Board of Tax Appeals the taxes had been assessed on cotton trading profits earned entirely by the All Union Textile Import of Moscow.

South China's Chief Ready To Quit Chiang

Japan

army were reported already arranging to redeclare their former independence and again come out publicly in the northwest as the Chinese Soviet government

Causes of the quarrel between Li and Chiang were:

The fact Chiang repeatedly has withdrawn his personal German-trained divisions from crucial battles rather than risk having them shot to pieces by the Japanese. (Gen. Li was described as particularly incensed at Chiang for refusals to leave his own forces in the Suchow and Kaifeng battles which resulted in collapse of the Lunghai line. Li was chief commander at Suchow. Li was said to have rebelled when Chiang ordered him to take command of reformed provincials at Yingchow in Anhwei Province, holding him responsible for the loss of Suchow.)

The generalissimo's refusal to send his air forces to Canton to defend that city from Japanese aerial bombing was the second factor.

One report was that the Japanese had sent word to local leaders in Canton warning them to agree to a separate armistice with Japan forthwith or face a Japanese army occupation of the city.

Japanese Advance.

Shanghai (Wednesday), June 8 (AP).—Japanese invaders moved with little opposition today against the railway crossroads of central China, where rising Yellow River waters threatened to inundate a vast battle area.

Dispatches from the front said capture of Chengchow, junction of the Peiping-Hankow and Lunghai Railway lines, appeared assured as Japanese airplanes unloaded new destruction on the city and ground forces reached a point only 10 miles to the east.

Some 70 miles further east, however, the river lapped over dikes northwest of Lanfeng. Chinese said a number of Japanese soldiers were drowned in the inundated countryside.

In new attacks in the Chengchow area Japanese were said to be almost unopposed in the air. Air defenses of Hankow, provisional Chinese capital, 300 miles south of Chengchow and main objective of the invaders likewise were decreased.

It was indicated Gen. Chiang Kai-shek was bent on fulfilling his promise to Kwangtung Province officials to send help against repeated Japanese bombardment which has reaped a heavy civilian toll in Canton.

Chinese admitted for the first time the loss of Kaifeng, 40 miles east of Chengchow.

Canton (Wednesday), June 8 (U.P.). British bluejackets today were reported to have been landed in the foreign areas on Shameen Island as Japanese planes staged new and devastating raids on this city, where more than 8,000 civilians already have been killed or wounded.

The U. S. gunboat Sacramento was standing by below the city, prepared to evacuate about 200 Americans in the Canton area, if necessary.

[The new attack, opening the twelfth successive day of bombardment, came shortly before dawn, the Associated Press reported.

[Bombs apparently struck the city's power station. Lights failed throughout Canton and in Shameen Island, the international quarter.—Editor's note.]

Culture Bureau Is Proposed for Latin Relations

The State Department asked Congress yesterday for authority to create a new, $25,000 division of cultural relations to cope with "activities of certain foreign governments" in Latin America.

The new organization would, among other things, assist in exchange of students and professors with Latin American countries, stimulate translation of English books into Spanish or Portuguese and make arrangements for teaching of Spanish and Portuguese in universities.

George Messersmith, Assistant Secretary of State, told the House Appropriations Committee during its consideration of the second deficiency appropriation bill that relations between the United States and the southern Nations have grown in importance.

"The activities of certain foreign governments in those republics have been stressed in recent years," he said, "causing serious damage to our interests and prestige.

"To await the regular 1940 appropriation bill would mean delay * * * so prejudicial that it is really doubtful whether the damage done could be wholly remedied."

Bluejackets Bar New Jamaica Riot

Kingston, Jamaica, June 7 (AP).—British bluejackets and colonial police patroled strife-torn Jamaica today to prevent recurrence of labor riots in which 14 persons have been killed.

One man was killed, 12 injured and 74 arrested last night when police fired into a demonstration of strikers and unemployed sympathizers.

The bluejackets were landed from H. M. S. Ajax to maintain order while a naval plane attempted to spot congregations of strikers.

Vevey, Switzerland, June 7 (U.P.). Shy little Cornelia Vanderbilt Cecil, richest and least known of the Vanderbilt heirs, today became the center of a divorce action brought by Mrs. Guy Baer, wife of a prominent Swiss artist.

Testimony in a Swiss court which caused the 38-year-old daughter of the late George W. Vanderbilt to be fined 50 Swiss francs ($11.30) for complicity in adultery will be used in the divorce action, lawyers said.

Friends of Baer, who drew a fine double the amount levied against Mrs. Cecil, also on adultery charges, said he would marry the Vanderbilt heiress.

John F. Maury, Realtor, Found Dead in Garage

John F. Maury, 52, prominent Washington realtor and grandson of one of the world's foremost marine geographers, was found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning early yesterday in the basement garage of his home, 37 West Lenox street, Chevy Chase, Md. His wife, Mrs. Edna Lee MacK. Maury, was grief-stricken, and was ordered to bed in the afternoon by the family physician after sedatives had been administered.

MAURY.

Maury, president of the firm of Maury & Mohler, was found slumped in the back seat of one of his automobiles with motors of both cars running. After resuscitation failed, Dr. William Sims, 1911 Twenty-first street northwest, issued a certificate of "death due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Grandson of Scientist.

Maury was grandson of the late Matthew Fontaine Maury, who became famous for his work as head of the hydrographical board in publishing "Wind and Current Charts" and "Sailing Charts." As the result, ocean voyages were shortened so that millions of dollars were saved annually. Maury also was a descendant of a famous Virginia family of that name.

Awakening about 5 a. m. yesterday, Maury told his wife he was going downstairs to read the morning newspapers. About 7:30 a. m., Viola A. Turner, colored maid, was preparing breakfast when she noted smoke coming from the garage doors. Not finding Maury in the house, she opened the garage doors and found him in one of the automobiles.

His three sons, John, jr., Richard and Dean, as well as Mrs. Maury, were asleep in the house as he died.

Maury was president of the Washington Real Estate Board in 1926 and 1927. He was a life member of Congressional Country Club, of University Club, National Press Club and Beach and Tennis Club of Edgemoor, Md.

Services Tomorrow.

He also was director of the District National Bank and the Bank of Commerce and Savings. During the war he served as a captain in the Army, and he was a major in the U. S. Officers Reserve Corps.

Besides his wife and sons he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Burlingham; a daughter, Mrs. Percy McCoy; two sisters, Mrs. Leon Frazier, of New York, and Mrs. Sam Morse, of California, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Joseph Gawler Sons funeral home, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Frank Taplin, Coal and Rail Magnate, Dead

Rockefeller Office Boy Was Lifelong Rival of Van Sweringen Interests.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 7.—Frank E. Taplin, 62, who directed one of the Nation's largest coal-producing companies and joined Pennsylvania Railroad interests to fight the Van Sweringen brothers' dream of a vast Eastern road consolidation, died today of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Taplin at 12 became office boy for the late John D. Rockefeller through influence of his father, Charles G. Taplin, vice president of the Standard Oil Co. When he died, he was chairman of North American Coal Corporation, and president and chairman of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railroad.

A dozen years ago Taplin, realizing railroad rates played an important part in the coal business, quietly bought controlling stock of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia. This he sold in 1929 to Pennroad Corporation, a Pennsylvania railroad ally. Taplin and associaties profited about $20,000,000 on the sale, he testified last January at a Senate investigation.

He hoped to mold a new "lakes to tidewater" route—from Cleveland through the rich West Virginia and Pennsylvania coal territory, to Baltimore—and built a 38-mile link connecting the P. & W. Va. with the Western Maryland Railroad.

Taplin secretly had almost acquired controlling stock in the Wheeling & Lake Erie. When the Van Sweringen brothers learned of this they spent a reported $30,000,000 to nose out Taplin. The Wheeling & Lake Erie stock then was split among the Van Sweringens' Nickel Plate Railroad, the New York Central and the Baltimore & Ohio. Later, when the fight cooled, it was through Taplin's accord that Nickel Plate took direct control of Wheeling & Lake Erie.

Taplin's planned lakes-sea link was mentioned as part of the "Wabash System," a proposed fifth Eastern trunk line designed to rival New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio and the Van Sweringens' Nickel Plate-C. & O. network.

Taplin's wife, two sons and a daughter survive.

New Jersey Fascists.

Those who have studied the development of modern dictatorships will find a distinctly ominous note in the so-called "Americanism rally" staged by Mayor Hague in Jersey City on Monday night. For it contained, in embryonic form, many of the attributes of those Fascist or Nazi demonstrations which accompanied the overthrow of democracy in Italy and Germany. Certainly no intelligent observer can have been fooled by the liberal display of American flags into thinking that this gathering had anything to do with Americanism.

There was nothing American in the elaborate efforts, including slogans in fireworks, to stir mass emotion against those vaguely called "Reds." There was nothing American in the activity of the mayor in taking leadership of this "only answer to radicalism." There is nothing of Americanism in the reports that merchants in the vicinity of Journal Square were coerced into decorating their store fronts. And certainly there is nothing of Americanism in the charges that WPA workers were forced to join the parade in masquerade as war veterans.

Jersey City, like Newark, has a very high proportion of foreign-born, predominantly of German, Italian and Polish origin. It is easy to understand how immigrants with only a superficial understanding of the American tradition could be persuaded, or coerced, into joining a rally similar to those so frequently ordered in the countries from which they come. It is not so easy to understand why leaders of the Democratic Party do not speak out against this dangerous exploitation of the ignorant by the man who is boss of that party in New Jersey.

There are several awkward questions to be asked about this demonstration. Why were units of the National Guard, a Federalized institution, permitted to march in so offensive a gathering? What action does the WPA propose with regard to the circumstantial charges that relief workers were forced to participate? What is the American Legion going to do with reference to the assertions that paraders were disguised as legionnaires to give this mob demonstration a pseudo-patriotic flavor?

If the legionnaires of Jersey City have anything in common with those of Frederick, Md., they will be prompt to disown Mayor Hague's endeavor to exploit them for his own advantage. A Legion newspaper in the nearby city has just summed up the basic issue in an editorial which notes that "Americanism is exactly what the word implies, the method of American living." And it sounds solemn warning to the Legion not to let itself be made "the organization to break down the spirit of American tolerance."

In no truly American community could there be such incidents as have recently made the names of Jersey City and Newark disturbing symbols of intolerance and alien practices. The sooner this is brought home to Mayor Hague the more quickly will this incipient Fuehrer occupy himself with less dangerous forms of political intrigue.

The Extra Job Evil.

Mayor LaGuardia is actively discouraging the growing practice whereby full-time city employes take part-time employment in private industry. While he doubts the legal right of the city to prohibit such employment outside working hours, he hints that the latter may be so adjusted as automatically to prevent it. For a good many reasons the Mayor's attitude is justified. Even if times were normal, and jobs to be had for the asking, the city might well object to its employes spending time and energy on outside paid occupations.

One of the major arguments advanced in favor of shorter working hours is that more leisure makes for greater efficiency and tends to offset the higher labor costs of the shortened working day and week. All these economic gains, as well as the purely personal benefits derivable from shorter hours, are of course forfeited if the added leisure merely provides opportunity for taking on another job. In many cases, double employment simply means, as Mayor LaGuardia believes, that one or other of the employers is being cheated.

In times of depression there is an especially compelling argument against the extra job. It prevents some men and women who are in desperate need of work from obtaining employment. In other cases the practice forces the needy to accept rates of pay unduly depressed by the unfair competition of already employed workers. Mayor LaGuardia rightly lays especial stress upon this evil. Part-time workers in a position to undercut more necessitous applicants are unwitting allies of employers disposed to exploit labor.

Although prohibitions upon extra jobs are difficult to enforce, and may work hardship upon some individuals, Mayor LaGuardia's position is, nevertheless, well taken. In government service—especially in New York where wages, salaries and working conditions are good—outside employment cannot be defended as essential to the maintenance of decent living standards. For the sake of the taxpayers, the workers themselves and the unemployed, the rule of one job for each person on the city pay rolls is a sound and reasonable demand.

A Lesson From Iowa.

The ability of American voters to analyze political issues realistically, has once more been demonstrated by the Iowa primaries. On the eve of the election Representative Wearin declared: "It is simply a question of whether Iowa wants to go forward with Roosevelt or backward with his enemies." Iowa Democrats knew that no such issue was at stake. So an overwhelming majority turned their backs upon Mr. Wearin and nominated Guy M. Gillette to succeed himself in the Senate.

The victory of Mr. Gillette is certainly a stinging rebuke for Relief Administrator Hopkins and other New Deal politicians who blundered into the Iowa contest. By attempting to make political capital of his position as head of the WPA Mr. Hopkins has embarrassed the Administration and cast ineradicable doubt on his suitability for his highly responsible job. Moreover, the indications are that his bungling interference was a severe handicap for Mr. Wearin.

The Democratic voters of Iowa repudiated Harry Hopkins and other leaders of the attempted purge. They did not turn their backs upon the New Deal. Senator Gillette strongly asserted his loyalty to the Administration in most of its objectives. He simply refused to serve as a yes-man to every executive proposal.

That stand is in keeping with the best traditions of representative government. Members of Congress are elected on party platforms and in general they are expected to support party measures. But the electorate certainly does not ask them to yield the right of thinking for themselves. When any President forces them to choose between the welfare of the party and the welfare of the country, legislators worth their salt do not hesitate to make the latter choice. It is a matter of deep and widespread satisfaction that the Democratic voters of Iowa have so clearly manifested their preference for a legislator of this type.

The only comfort which the Administration can find in this outcome is the fact that it did not openly indorse Mr. Wearin. As events have proved, that would have been a terrible mistake. Avoidance of that blunder seems to be due largely to the calm judgment of Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee and of Secretary Wallace, who knows his fellow Iowans.

Even as matters stand, the Iowa results are sufficiently embarrassing for the President. He permitted the Government's dispenser of relief and his own son to set up a presumption of Presidential favor for Mr. Gillette's opponent. Mr. Wearin was also allowed to represent himself as the White House candidate without evoking any declaration of neutrality from the President. Instead of strengthening Mr. Wearin, that tacit indorsement has made the Nation thoroughly aware of the contemplated purge and all its implications.

Undoubtedly the political activities of Mr. Hopkins and other members of the "elimination committee" will be more carefully analyzed in the future. Indeed, the whole idea of punishing every Democratic Senator who voted against the court bill may now be dropped. If that issue comes up in other primary contests it will probably be opponents of the court bill who will raise it. The vote of almost 2 to 1 for Mr. Gillette suggests that opposition to packing the Supreme Court is a political asset, at least in the Middle West.

Legislative independence has been richly rewarded. The idea of a Senate subservient to every wish of the President has been struck a resounding blow. From that sound, common-sense reaction timorous legislators may take new heart to vote their own convictions. The lure of WPA support will be less attractive. Congress will be more inclined to function as a deliberative, law-making body; rather than a rubber stamp for executive edicts of very questionable wisdom.

Rear Guard Action.

Efforts of the House conferees to lop off some of the more inexcusable items in the pump-priming bill are an encouraging reminder that resistance to continuous deficit financing has not completely broken down in Congress. When the Senate concluded action on the bill there was a prevalent impression that the bars were down and that any outlay with a semblance of justification would be approved.

The sober attitude of the House conferees now puts the Senate in the difficult position of having to justify the amendments it so recklessly voted. Foremost among these is the $212,000,000 sop for farmers to be distributed in the form of "parity payments." As noted by Representative Woodrum, this item was approved by the Senate "practically without any hearings," despite the President's specific plea that no such payments be authorized unless new taxes are voted to cover them.

Under any condition this amendment would be out of place in a relief bill. It means a significant modification of the agricultural policy embodied in the farm act of 1938 and the appropriation heretofore granted the AAA. The House group is entirely justified in demanding elimination of this "rider" so that farm parity payments may be considered on their own merits, if any.

Because of the ease with which Congress votes billions nowadays, this controversy over a couple of hundred million may seem relatively unimportant. But conscientious legislators cannot take that attitude. Reckless spending of public money will be checked only if responsible public servants make a habit of scrutinizing every item. By insisting on that process now, even if it means postponement of adjournment for a few days, House conferees will perform an important public service.

More Bushido.

For 11 successive days squadrons of Japanese planes have rained death and destruction on Canton, with casualties mounting high into the thousands.

As always, the pretext is that these air raids are necessary to achieve the destruction of military objectives and that these alone are the objects of attack. That is obvious eye-wash. The principal purpose of the bombings is to terrorize the Chinese and destroy their will to resist. They are much more likely to unite all China in an undying hatred of everything Japanese.

It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the military leaders responsible for such inhuman and uncivilized tactics have lost their heads completely. Unable to win, in fair fighting, the war which they originally believed would be a walkover, the Japanese militarists manifest their wrath on helpless civilians unable to fight back. The Canton bombings are a clear sign of Japan's increasing lack of assurance regarding the outcome of the undeclared war.

But the implications of Japan's wanton ruthlessness reach far beyond the boundaries of China. Out of sheer self-interest, let alone humanitarian considerations, the civilized world is being forced to consider something more than mere verbal protest. What is happening at Canton today happened at Barcelona yesterday and may happen elsewhere tomorrow. Certainly official denunciations have not accomplished their purpose. Canton has been raided by the Japanese repeatedly since the British, American and French governments condemned such tactics in strong language.

Japan has been greatly weakened by this prolonged and expensive war. It is difficult to believe that the present government could withstand any concerted financial and economic pressure from the outside. Many individuals will be stirred by the latest manifestations of Japan's barbarism to intensify their boycott of Japanese goods. And enough individual action in this direction will assuredly encourage more definite governmental protests.

Squirrels Of Mobile.

There's an old story attributed to William ("Bathysphere") Beebe that begins with his return home through a snowstorm one night. He has with him a goldfish on which he has been asked to perform an autopsy. As he takes from his pocket a handkerchief in which the fish is wrapped it flips into a snowdrift.

A true scientist, he goes down on his knees and begins groping. A policeman happens by. "Just looking for a fish," is the unlikely explanation. To humor him, the officer gets down and runs his hand through the snow—and to his consternation comes up with the fish. As the curtain falls the two are seen filing off into the night, the policeman behind muttering darkly, "A goldfish! A goldfish!"

The story had always seemed too good to be true until a recent squib arrived from Mobile. The old ditty has for years broadcast the information that "the birds they fly high in Mobile, in Mobile." Now it appears that squirrels of that city have somewhat the same aspirations. A few days ago William Mace, of Pensacola, was observed pursuing a bushy-tailed rodent through the upper part of an oak on Bienville Square. "Come down," a suspicious policeman ordered. Mr. Mace complied but not before reaching up into the branches above him.

On confronting the officer he held out the keys to his car. He had dropped them a few moments earlier and the squirrel had seized them, raced off into the tree and finally abandoned them in a crotch. Deponent saith not but it seems certain that in this story the officer's closing line would have been, tersely, "Nuts."

Canned Campaigning.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

Canned speech is not new, but late developments indicate that it is now assuming an important role in politics for the first time. Senators and Representatives in Washington, apparently impressed by the success of President Roosevelt's fireside chats, have adopted the scheme of chatting to the folks back home through the medium of phonograph records. Run off in front of loud speakers, these canned talks, it is figured, will hold crowds of constituents spellbound and partybound.

The canned speech has the disadvantage of lacking a physical presence behind it, capable of projecting personality by means of facial expression and gestures. But it has advantages that far outweigh this drawback. It is suppressable at a second's notice, if the audience shows signs of restlessness or rebellion; it is serenely unaffected by heckling, whether in the form of jeers or sly questions, vegetables or fruit; but best of all it permits the candidate to speak before widely separated audiences at one and the same time without physical strain.

We may expect the political rallies of the future to open with the announcement: "It is our good fortune to have with us tonight the voice of that peerless statesman, Senator Persiflage, electrically transcribed."

Mr. Hull's Speech.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following letter was sent on June 6 to the Hon. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State:

"In behalf of our committee, composed of over 5,000 lawyers in all parts of the country, we wish heartily to congratulate you upon your recent speech before the Tennessee Bar Association, in which you called upon the American people for a strong and united backing of a program designed to restore throughout the world the principles of order under law.

"We wholeheartedly agree with you when you state that the rise of international anarchy and savagery makes urgent the need for action to reverse the present disastrous trends.

"Our committee feels that the sole way to reverse the disastrous trends which you refer to in your speech may be accomplished if the Government of the United States adhere to a policy of support for legally elected democratic governments when confronted by civil rebellion or invasion by insurrectionary or foreign regimes.

"This would require the immediate lifting of the embargo against the Spanish government so that it may defend itself against its domestic and foreign enemies.

"We believe that the President of the United States has authority to revoke his proclamation banning shipments of war materials to the Spanish government. We refer you to our brief submitted to the State Department and to the President in the early part of April, 1938, at an interview with Messrs. Moore, Hackworth and Dunne, of the State Department. We believe our brief conclusively establishes the proposition that the general neutrality legislation of May, 1937, repeals or supersedes the January, 1937, resolution, thereby investing the President with power to revoke his proclamation.

"We believe your speech is an important step in the right direction. We urge you to put it into practical terms by revoking the arms embargo against the Spanish government immediately."

EDWARD T. FRIENDLY,
Executive Secretary.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The group of Kiowa Indians who were on a National Folk Festival program have returned home stating that they had a very enjoyable trip. These Indians asked me to express their appreciation for having been allowed to appear on the program.

Our Indians have appeared on the National Folk Festival programs for the past four or five years and it is quite an incentive for them to appear on a program of such national importance. This was the first time most of this group had ever been in Washington and it was quite an education for them. They asked me to express their thanks to you for your sponsorship of such a fine program.

Lewis Vs. Tydings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the letter signed "A Native of Maryland" in your issue of June 6 on David J. Lewis, who is opposing Tydings for the Senate. Mr. Lewis may be and doubtless is a very excellent man, as claimed by your correspondent, but personally I would prefer a Senator like Tydings, who is not a rubber stamp, but who appears to act upon principle and has the courage of his convictions.

Especially would I prefer him to one who indulged recently in severe criticism of the Supreme Court, and particularly of its decision holding that the salaries of Federal judges were not subject to the income tax.

Barbs For The New Deal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pegler, who has sailed into various past New Deal absurdities, in his opus "Was the Old Deal So Bad" should strike responsive chords in growing numbers whose ears have been assailed by the hammering of New Deal preachments, speeches, doctrines, proclamations, declarations, brags, boasts and baloney.

These victims have witnessed the greatest era of bungling and misuse of public funds and power in United States history, put out under every variety of fancy label in an effort at justification; and putting all public malefactors of the last two decades to rout and shame.

And they see the 12,000,000 who were to be saved more in need of saving then when the hectic frenzy first smote the professional salvationists, for whose futile gestures their descendants will be mulcted in taxes as their contemporaries are being rendered workless.

The latest Gallup poll indicates eyes are beginning to open, but the coefficient of blindness stays high. A painful fear remains that the other kind of "ayes" will be in order again as soon as the new $4,000,000,000 taxpayers' nightmare and molehill added to the deficit mountain begins to be spooned out, under political direction.

When a solution of present difficulties begins to take shape it will be in spite of, not on account of, efforts from the masters of ledefforts from the masters of legerdemain in Washington. E. G. B.

WPA Funds For Trees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily agree with the recent letter of your correspondent Mr. E. K. Goldsborough about shade trees in Cleveland and in Washington.

Why should it not be regarded as proper for WPA funds to be devoted to the planting and care of trees, which are perhaps the one greatest public asset that any city can have?

Or must a "project" to be legitimate always call for huge profitable contracts in cement and concrete construction, and for the ruthless and indiscriminate destruction of trees, as in Washington?

Impressive Book.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other day I picked up a little book in the Public Library. It is called "Philosopher and Reformer," by John C. Rose. It tells the story of Francis W. Maguire, a reformer who lived up to his ideals.

"Philosopher and Reformer" is a small volume, but one that expresses much in a very small compass. In fact, its brevity and compactness are features of style that suggest a new venture in biography.

Would that more books were written in the style of "Philosopher and Reformer."

Street Names.

Paris has the Street of the Fishing Cat, the Street of Bad Boys and the Street of the Little Peoples. At Besancon, in the Jura Mountains, a square bears the name of Bacchus. At Epinal, in the Vosges region, is the Alee of Vain Effort, while in Toulouse there is a thoroughfare known as Jealousy street. Another has the unusual appellation of Street of Watch Your Step; still others, the Street of the Four Billiards, the Street of the Three Banquets and, finally, the Street of the Thirteen Winds. In another part of France, in Beauvais, famed for its cathedral, is the Street of the Salt Attic and the Street of Climb With Regret. In Strasbourg is a street with a smelly name, at least, for it is known as Garlic street; there is also a Square of the Milk-Fed Pig.

The School Of Venality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United States Senate, under the potent hypnotism of the pallid and pillared mansion at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, is understood to have a set of experts working on the problem, How much is a trillion? Weary and worn with tinkering with mere billions (piker money!), they are interested in crawling into the higher brackets of profligacy. Having just earmarked three paltry billions (there are some odd millions attached to the sum, but millions are cigarette money, and thousands aren't even noticed any more), they are spitting on their wasteful hands in preparation for a job of real spending. They chuckle, "You ain't seen nothin' yet!"

They have practically earmarked the Ickes-Hopkins PWA funds for election purposes by refusing to restrict its use for political promotion; they have earmarked a lot more for the purpose of putting the Government into competition with the utilities in whose securities our funds are invested. They are naive enough to think that thinking people (there are a few of those rarities left) will believe that the Government industries will keep out of the competitive field just because Dear Alben, speaking with no specific authority but mainly on his own office-hungry initiative, has said this would be the case.

Maybe they are naive, maybe not. The civic morality of the country is ditched. A few us us know about the wreck and wish it could be salvaged, but the great mass of people, corrupted by the outflow of our tax money for the purpose of keeping the spenders in, are paying no attention whatever.

The great American occupation in these days is wondering how soon the public funds are going to be showered upon them. "It is wrong, of course, but look at the money it brings to us and to the community!" Can you think of any low-down occupation—dive to the depths and write your own ticket in regard to degradation—that can't offer that same specious plea? Is there any dirty business that has not operated on that principle? "It is degradation, of course. But we make our living at it."

Vice crusades are conducted to rid cities of the sort of occupations giving that as their raison d'etre.

Hitler holds elections when there is only one candidate. We laugh at it. Let's not do so any more. We're getting ready to do the same thing. With a whole country schooled in venality, we are going through the farce of holding an election when one side has the United States Treasury at its command—not only that, but all the money our descendants will have for the next 200 years, if America lasts so long—with which to influence (I mean buy) voters.

The Senate cannot pass the buck to the President. They did it. They, with the final say-so in their hands, intrusted—nay, mandated—with the job, abandoned their role as guardians of the people's interests and said:

"The lid is off. We want to be re-elected. Nothing else matters. Continue the bribe to our constituents, so that we may get back to the Government pay roll."

That is why the experts have been engaged to go into the matter of the trillion. A trillion might seem important money for a while. The word billion used to take our breath. Now we hear it and speak it—even when it is to come, without our wishes, from our own pockets—and never so much as bat an eye.

Bring on the trillion. It would probably look like real money through as many as one Presidential campaign, before our restless research in the realm of quadrillions began.

A REMAINING AND LONELY AMERICAN.

The Post Impressionist

From The Rear.

MY neighbor gathered up her knitting and prepared to go.

"I don't see how you can bear living in this back apartment," she remarked, cramming the bright wool in her bag. "I should think you'd die from sheer boredom with not a thing to see when you look out those windows except that horrible alley. And you're alone all day—it's enough to make you crazy! Well," as she struggled into her coat, "you can always come and sit with me any time you can't stand it back here any longer! I live right on the front where I can see things going on all day, people and cars. Always something," she emphasized, "so come over, do," she urged kindly, and she moved to the door.

When she had gone I walked over to my windows. It is true my apartment faces on an alley, but on the other side are the yards of some old red brick houses who turn an aloof back to me the while presenting chaste fronts to another street.

In the summer these yards brim over with the crisp green of growing things. Two young trees lift eager arms to the sky and Virginia creepers voluminous as the skirts of a crinoline girl, fling their yards and yards of fluttering leaves over the fence palings.

In the spring these two trees—one is a pear and the other a double Japanese cherry—are girlishly proud of their blossoms and wave their slender limbs the better to display the pretty pinks and whites of their flowers.

In winter when the trees are bare I like to watch the rain string crystal drops along their shining black branches like beads strung on a dark string, or see the snow make soft edgings on them like the tiny white neck and wristbands old ladies wear on their prim dresses.

The human element that makes up my alley world is heterogeneous, and there are many I have grown to watch for; I would miss them if they failed to pass, for their faces are now known to me, and though we have never spoken—indeed, they do not know I exist—I take a kindly interest in them.

The earliest of these regulars is a young colored woman who goes along early mornings when I am beginning my first household tasks. She is the wife of a janitor in a nearby apartment building, and is maid in one of Washington's wealthy families. Whatever trig uniform she may wear about her daily tasks, as she passes me she is garbed in the latest F street fashion, a symphony in some particular color, never a medley. This morning she presented a subdued harmony in navy blue, her large hat the bizarre output of some surrealist manufacturer.

Next comes the garbage collector. This is a mountainous young man who propels one of the District's trucks through this alley several times a week. He brings the great vehicle to a halt, his helpers leap to their duties but the young man never knows if they collect rubbish or roses for his nose is always stuck in a magazine. I don't know what literary fare the young mountain revels in: I only know that for three years I have seen him bring the truck to a pause, the magazine is open on his knees, his men jump off like frogs dropping into a pond, his eyes skim the printed pages with a steadiness that mere routine of duty cannot interrupt. His crew return and the great maw of the truck receives their burdens, the mountain automatically shifts gears and they rumble away.

The little old lady from the Home around the corner paces beneath my windows at a few minutes past 1 o'clock, rain or shine come day, go day. Her gentle face is settled in melancholy lines and her graying hair is pinned in neat strands, her cotton dress is starched and clean. In winter she wears an ancient sweater. She talks to herself in her faded voice, her eyes blind to the present, seeing—who can say?—what loved scenes in the distant past? Sometimes she sings bits from gospel hymns, her voice as delicate as gray dimity. Today when she passed she was holding a heavy red rosebud and making soft talk to herself as her old feet picked their careful way.

The retired colonel, on the other hand, has no set time for passing. He is small and delicate and not a vestige of authority clings about him; neither is he dapper as colonels are reputed to be; his dress is a hodge-podge of venerable garments. I have seen him wear an old gray coat with a pair of aged brown pants, while his feet were in disreputable oxfords that had once been white, and no socks. When he speaks to a passerby it is in terms of courtesy and his voice is cultivated and low. He never talks to himself and he always grips a straight black pipe in his teeth. His hair straggles over his worn coat collars. Sometimes he stops under my window and pulls handfuls of Bermuda grass that springs up in the foot space between building and pavement, and takes it carefully away with him, doubtless to feed to rabbits or other pets.

My phone has just rung. It is my friend, who is all excited. She has learned that the apartment next hers is to be vacant. "Now why don't you take it and get out of those back rooms?" she stresses anxiously. But I put her off. I give evasive answers and finally she hangs up. I could never tell her about the rain on the trees. And what if the little colonel appear spruced and handsome?

I'd never know if I moved. So I'll keep my back windows and my unknown friends.

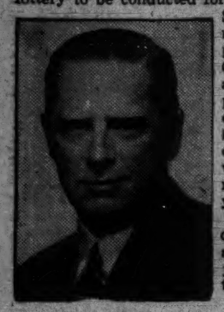
Dream Money.

THE RECENT distribution of easy money to a few Americans through the Irish Sweepstakes revives the yearnings of many citizens for an official national lottery to be conducted for the benefit of the United States Treasury and the relief of taxpayers. Proposals have been made in Congress to organize such a gamble, usually with a prediction that the Government would receive a billion a year on the basis of a 40 per cent take. That would mean a gross business of $2,500,000,000 a year.



PEGLER.

These predictions are all dream stuff, however. They are made of hope and conjecture, and they ignore the known facts.

It is a known fact that in 1935, in the 18 American States which permitted and supervised racing by running and harness horses and dogs, the total amount gambled was only $257,562,000, a little more than a quarter of a billion dollars. This excludes the racing in New York State and New Orleans, on which there was no data because of the absence of official supervision. The total return to the 18 States was only $8,976,000.

This was open, legal gambling, and the figures would seem to embarrass the enormous estimates which the police and prosecutors place upon the penny-ante numbers racket.

• • • •

ONE READS of the millions handled by furtive, underworld creatures such as the late "Dutch" Schultz, of New York, and his political silent partners, but, comparing the method and the average amount of the bets with the horse park traffic, one is compelled to doubt. A "Dutch" Schultz with a flash roll of $10,000 in currency may seem to be a millionaire. But it is known that the numbers racket deals in bets of pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters and must operate more or less secretly. It is hard to believe that the numbers racket handles as much as the licensed race tracks, with their open facilities and publicity.

The British are great gamblers, but the Glasgow Herald, in a careful survey of the football pools, which roughly correspond to the numbers racket in this country, except that they are legal and widely advertised, found that the gross handle for a season of 36 weeks was not more than $200,000,000. The football pools pretend to operate on a pari-mutuel system, but there is no assurance that they do, because the British law does not regulate them. Ostensibly they retain only 5 per cent as profit, but that is only what the operators say.

The Irish Sweep conducts three pools a year and it is understood that this country, Ireland's best customer since the British placed a legal boycott on the Sweep, buys about 50 per cent of the tickets. It is hard to obtain true figures on the amount of the American trade, but in last year's Cesarewitch it was announced that the Americans had bought about $7,000,000 of an issue slightly less than $14,000,000.

• • • •

IF THIS figure may be taken as an index we buy $7,000,000 worth of Irish Sweep tickets three times a year, a total of $21,000,000, which looks very puny in comparison with the hundreds of millions which we are said to export to Ireland. These hundreds of millions of dream money are cited as one of the strongest arguments in favor of an American national lottery. The idea is to keep the money at home. But if the amount is only $21,000,000 a year it is unimportant economically.

Anyway, the real figures, whenever it is possible to dig them out, discourage the idea that this country gambles in billions or would gamble in billions if we had a lottery. There is no law against wishing, but the statistics are against fulfillment.

As to the morality of the Sweep, there is little to be said in opposition when many of the States permit open gambling on the races and take a percentage. But it can be pointed out, in addition to the apparent overestimate of the probable profits, that we have one of the few countries on earth which have no national lottery and that those countries which do have them are not conspicuously happy. In theory lotteries may be very tempting, but in practice the nations which use them soon find themselves no better off.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

If We Ran Our Home Finances On The Government Plan.

Mom (a little worried)—Are you sure we ought to go ahead and order an auto for each member of the family.

Dad (lightly)—Why not?

Mom—Can we afford them?

Dad—Certainly not, but why consider a trivial point like that? You think of the darndest things!

Mom—Just how do we stand financially?

Dad—I think, as of last night, we only owe $350,547.87.

Mom—You've always been a small-salaried man. It couldn't be possible for us to owe that much money?

Dad (whistling)—On the contrary, it's been no trouble at all. In fact, I feel I should have doubled that figure by this time. I was talking to the man next door. He's managed to run his debt to nearly $500,000 on an income of $30 a week. He's got something, that fellow.

Junior—Pop, can I have a new sports coupe?

Dad (yawning)—By all means! But I still think you might pick something more expensive.

Mom—Junior's 1937 car is in good shape. Couldn't we economize just a little?

Dad—Economizing destroys the whole mood of things. Why talk of saving a few thousand dollars here and there when it is so easy to get into debt by millions?

Mom—But is it possible to spend more than you get without a final accounting?

Dad—Of course it is. Don't you read those Washington speeches?

• • • •

Their daughter—Mommer, aren't we going to take that big cottage at the shore this summer? They asked only $5,000 for the season.

Mom—I suppose we might as well. What's an obligation of $5,000 at a time like this?

Dad—Now you're learning to understand economics, mother.

Junior—I forgot to tell you that Mr. Arbuckle, the owner of that cottage, called up and said he would have to get $7,000 for it. There's a big demand this year for cottages by people who can't afford them.

Dad—Get him on the wire and offer him $10,000.

Mom (still a little fearful)—Where will we get the money?

Dad (sharply)—There you go worrying me again! I'm doing my best to make us all happy and prosperous and you have no more sense than to ask me to figure things out in cold dollars and cents.

• • • •

Mom—What peacocks?

Dad—I ordered a flock of 'em. They look nice on the lawn and they cost only $700 each, payable over a period of 37 years.

Mom—We got along all our lives without peacocks.

Dad—Yes, but that was back in good times!

Dad (enthusiastically)—Yes, and thank heaven we'll never have to go through those again!

Foreign Arms In Spain

Recent Shipments Have Improved Barcelona's War Strength, Observer Reports, But Franco Forces Still Supreme In Heavy Armament, Air.

By Ray Brock.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Hendaye (Franco-Spanish Border.)

AS THIS IS written they are heating things up in London (between frantic peace-making efforts in the Czech-German quarrel) for another and more serious go at non-intervention in Spain.

This means that unless something unforeseen and tremendously important occurs, there will be a British-propelled drive to seal the French frontier against rifles, automatic rifles, machine guns, hand grenades, light and heavy artillery, tanks and crated war planes bound for Government Spain.

British diplomatic sources on the Franco Spanish frontier insist that this time the Non-Intervention officers will come down from their villas at Perpignan, Vernet-les-Bains and Amelie-les-Bains and earn their salaries. More money is to be provided by the Non-Intervention Powers to pay the salaries.

It is no secret that arms for Government Spain have been crossing the French frontier in ever-increasing quantities, since early April. It is so well-known that in recent weeks the old practice of labeling tank lorries "dried vegetables" and "food for republican Spain" has been abandoned.

The time is thus about as ripe right now as it will ever be for a factual comparison of the foreign arms and foreign armies in service with Gen. Franco and with the Spanish government.

Few Secrets Regarding International Brigade.

IN MORE TH.N two months in Barcelona, Valencia and Madrid and on all the fronts I found very little hush-hush about the numerical force and composition of the International brigades, about the style and manufacture of their armaments and even about the shape and size of the government air force.

It is next to impossible to secure such information in Franco Spain, for a Spaniard found discussing these things with an outsider is subject to arrest, courtmartial and possible execution. The garrulous Italian pilots spill the beans sometimes in their boasting. The Germans are less talkative but most reliable when they do talk about the war paraphernalia Franco has received and is daily receiving from Germany and Italy.

It is now generally known and freely admitted that the government's international brigades were badly scattered, suffered heavy losses and many captures during the mad retreat across Aragon in late March and early April. At one time near the end of April there were less than 2,000 men in active front-line service with the column. Most symposia on the subject of the brigades are far wide of their mark because most of them appear to be originating from Franco Spain.

A new shipment of 10,000 automatic rifles—to resume the arms comparison—was delivered to Valencia on May 2. With heavy rains, these new arms in the hands of young government soldiers stopped the Castellon offensive ten days later. Most government soldiers still carry the ancient Oviedo rifles of the old army. Franco's Moorish columns are armed with new stub-nosed German rifles. The Falangi and the troops of Navarre bear Oviedo's and the new German arms, mixed.

Republicans Weak In Heavy Armament.

IN THE BIGGER guns, as in air power, the government forces are dwarfed. Recent shipments brought in three new batteries of light field guns for the government gunners. They were rushed to the Balaguer and Lerida fronts but they had no effect on the big cannon of the insurgents, which are admittedly manned by German gun-crews.

Reliable estimates give the government's present tank strength at less than 150 machines, of which only 35 are the "giant" variety. These have just been delivered piggy-back on giant Diesel trucks from France, where they were manufactured. The Germans have not done a great deal of tank work in Spain since the attack of the two-man toy tanks at Malaga in the early days. The Italian Col. Sabini commands the regular Franco tank corps—two divisions of light and heavy tanks and one division of high-speed armored cars, such as operated at Frags and Larida.

The Italian infantry numbers just under 28,000 at the present, comprising the legionary army corps. Gen. Bergonzoli commands the "Littorio" division, Gen. Francisci the "Black Flames"—23rd of March, and Gen. Roatta the "Black Arrows," a total of 36 battalions, slightly less than full strength.

It is in the air that the government is overwhelmed completely. The government force is largely pursuit. There are three squadrons of heavy Russian bombers, newly imported and manned by Russians, Frenchmen, Americans and Spaniards. The Spanish pilots are just learning to handle the new Russian giants. With a handful of old bombers, including one squadron of shaky Curtiss planes, five or six fast but heavy Lockheed Vegas and nine front-line strength squadrons of Mosca and Chato chasers, the government air force is complete. The organization is extremely flexible, for nearly all the craft—old and new—are kept in service nearly all the time. Good American and French mechanics swarm over every plane as it rolls to a stop after a flight.

Franco's Agents Condemn Bombings.

THE FRANCO air force is more properly three air forces, virtually autonomous. Since the Barcelona bombings of mid-March, Franco agents on the frontier condemn these bombardments quite openly as the independent and unsolicited work of German fliers, under their own command at Majorca. The German base is at Pollensa, the Italian field at Palma. These two fields, in good weather, are busy from morning until the small hours of the following morning with bombardments of the coastal cities and strafing on the highway. It has been difficult to check to the usual extent upon the Italian squadrons at Majorca, for they have been reinforced from time to time and relieved. This information was gathered as the foregoing material was gathered: through the remarkably efficient government military intelligence department; from examination of prisoners and through private sources close to the government.

It was checked and double-checked wherever possible, through sources in rebel Spain, including the fliers themselves, correspondents and certain semi-official visitors who were permitted to discuss this touchy subject with the Nationalist air force command. This is the Spanish unit and is flown almost entirely by Spaniards. It consists of three squadrons of nine planes each, Fiat CR'32's; two squadrons of light Fiats, two squadrons of Savoia 79's, two squadrons of Heinkel 51's and one rapidly diminishing squadron of older mixed planes, chiefly Breda chasers. There are also a few old Dorniers attached to the Spanish wing at Majorca and several old Junkers.

The Legionary (Italian) Air Force consists of approximately 400 planes when both the Majorca and Salamanca bases are near full strength. About half these are Fiats, light Savoia 79's, Grays and Romeos—all of the chasse type. The others are the heavy duty bombers, the big Savoias. Gens. Velarde and Benascani were in command of the Legionary Air Force in late April, but this command has been shifted several times and it is reported that the commanders usually operate under assumed names, as government infantry commanders did in the earlier days of the war.

Atrocity Raids Laid to Germans.

MOST FORMIDABLE of the rebel aerial squadrons, of course, is the German "Condor Legion," commanded by Gen. Veidt, of the German air force. This thoroughly efficient organization is blamed, even by Franco sympathizers, for most of the so-called "atrocity bombings" of Barcelona and of Guernica, earlier in the war.

The present strength of the Condor legion is reported to be: Eight squadrons of Messerschmidt pursuit planes; three squadrons of Heinkel bombers, 51's; two squadrons of Dornier scouts, 17's; one patrol of Heinkel 45's and 100 mixed planes, chiefly light Heinkels and old Junkers, used now chiefly for military sport.

The German fliers and bombardment experts are extremely proud of their record in Spain, where they are admittedly the cream of the flying corps. The ordinarily taciturn German pilots frequently become quite voluble when the subject of their expert bombardment work is introduced. One young pilot told a correspondent at San Sebastian that the German Condor legion bombardment groups had been exchanged frequently during the past six months, enabling most of the regular German air force experts to secure practice under "ideal conditions."

Court Portrait

By Emory Niles.

Mr. Ludwig's Mr. Roosevelt.

WHEN THE ARTIST decided for the first time to execute a portrait of a living Subject he was furnished every facility, from lunch at Hyde Park to an unobtrusive station in the President's office throughout a busy sunny morning listening to the conversations and interviews of the Subject with the procession of Congressmen, officials and miscellaneous characters which included an Indian princess. Was she West Indian or East Indian? No matter; she did not destroy the serenity of the Subject whose inner harmony was ministered to by a collection of toy donkeys on his desk and who called his secretary "Missy."

The facilities made available to the Artist included more than those of the White House, for the background is enlivened with observations on American life, the greedy and malicious enemies of the Subject, his great and generous intellectual advisers, the unbaptised ghosts of the slaughtered little pigs, and the honest but outmoded skulls of the members of the Supreme Court. Those could only have been found with the aid of those earnest men who have dedicated their lives to the carrying of the Subject's ideals. What an achievement to have appreciated these things, in a foreign land to have seen their true beauty, and now to have given them to the "slow" and yet idealistic American people—to reveal the genius for action which, without philosophy, books or study, but believing principally in the great god of luck, has without any of the trappings of dictatorship, but always with simplicity and laughter, carried through a revolution in America and has saved America from a revolution.

And, that all may know that the portrait has been accepted as a true likeness, the Artist confesses that he submitted to the Subject those passages in which his own utterances were reproduced, and "all he changed was a word here and there." The Subject could find no cause for complaint about the rest.

WHETHER THIS PORTRAIT is greater than, or not so great as, other court portraits, of Manuel IX, George II or Ferdinand XXIII, for example, this reviewer, not being a student of such matters, is unable to say. He hazards the guess, however, that in a number of qualities it compares not unfavorably with the average, for example: in posing and supporting the thesis that the subject is an honorable, fortunate and admirable person; in minimizing his greater, and concealing his lesser imperfections; in painting all of the Subject's enemies black, and in depicting all of their ideas as steeped in murky selfishness. In its monotony of repetition of these motifs and in its faithful adherence to the heroic, or adulatory style, the Artist shows himself to be consistent with his own traditions, since the present portrait completes a gallery which includes Lincoln, Napoleon, Bismarck and Cleopatra. In places, however, the lines of this latest portrait seem almost overconventionalized, and the observer fancies that he describes lineaments borrowed from all four of the others.

The Artist in his introduction confesses that it is difficult in the case of a Subject who still is in full career to preserve a proper perspective. He will, therefore, perhaps forgive the reviewer who labors under the same difficulty. But to the reviewer and to the reviewer's readers the matter is of more consequence than to the Artist. For their lives and futures are the playthings of the subject, who gayly, with serenity and with dignity, with charm and with laughter, without study and without philosophy, from the heights of the aristocratic tradition which impels him to call his country estate his farm (in order not to embarrass those less fortunate) continues to carry on, and to save his country from a revolution.

• • • •

THE CENTRAL THEME of the portrait is the inner strength and upright power which can be possessed only by a true aristocrat, who has described and rejected the faults and selfishness of his class; of the country gentleman who despises the shallowness and instability of the city man, and whose personal victory over physical affliction has resulted in a powerful and fearless leader who sees the evils of our country, who determines to correct them, and who has the power to compel others to follow or obey him.

Is the likeness a true one? The picture is a pretty one.

The Labor Front

By Frank M. Kleiler.

"LABOR'S NEW MILLIONS," by Mary Heaton Vorse, relates the important labor events of the last few years in terms of both human interest and historical background. It should win a place on the shelf along with Edward Levinson's "Labor On the March," Robert R. R. Brooks' "When Labor Organizes" and J. Raymond Walsh's "C. I. O.: Industrial Unionism In Action." All four books cover the same material and are about equal in merit.

A significant fact about these books is that their writers appear unanimous in regarding the Committee for Industrial Organization as greater in potentialities and achievements than the American Federation of Labor. Mrs. Vorse in particular credits the C. I. O. officers with tremendous feats of human engineering, unusual intelligence, breadth of vision and sincerity of purpose. She quotes from the speeches of John L. Lewis as another might quote Holy Writ.

• • • •

WHILE THE A. F. OF L. was almost exclusively the labor movement in this country for half a century, relatively few authors considered it sufficiently interesting and significant to write popular books concerning its purposes and activities. Now, however, the labor movement has become a rich source of material. All things connected with organized labor, from union resolutions to the way the leaders wear their hair, suddenly appear to have qualified as worthy of recording for posterity.

This new attitude might be explained as the result of several factors. Less economic security, governmental protection of the right to organize and reduction in the number of business owners all are reflected in the expanded labor movement. To these elements Mrs. Vorse adds the revision of labor's conception of itself. Labor "is nothing of itself in the terms of industrial labor any more," she reports. "It has seen that industrial labor, white collar and professional workers, agricultural workers and the small farmer are all one. The service trades and the manufacturing trades must walk hand in hand. It has seen that so long as there is a pool of cheap labor in the disinherited tenant farmers and share-croppers, industrial labor is not safe." This new spirit in the labor movement, however, condemns the exclusiveness of the old trade unions and insists that all workers shall be organized.

WITH HER BACKGROUND of labor history and sympathy, Mrs. Vorse comes to certain conclusions regarding the tasks before labor. She sees as the immediate problems the solidification and extension of the organizational and political gains and the battle in both fields against unemployment. She believes that labor must educate its membership and cement the bonds between industrial and white collar workers and the farmers. She is convinced that organized labor's participation in politics is inevitable.

Problems such as these Mrs. Vorse discusses competently. She fails to direct attention, however, to some of the more technical problems. She gives no information on the difficulties involved in negotiating agreements. She sheds no light on the problems of structure and the relative merits of centralized power in a federation versus autonomy of affiliated bodies. Her discussion of internal discipline within the ranks of labor and labor union responsibility is too sketchy to be enlightening. She provides no clews for determining whether labor shall endeavor to put its own men into public office, or whether it shall merely "reward its friends and punish its enemies." The omission of such matters as these is the one great weakness of the book.

House Group Votes Fund for 19 Warships

Senate Grants 556 Million for War Department and Army Housing.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday approved expenditure of $35,802,000 to start construction under the billion-dollar naval expansion program.

The funds were carried as part of the $272,516,979 second deficiency bill on which the House immediately began debate after receiving the committee report.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved and sent to the White House a bill appropriating $450,000,000 to the War Department for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The upper chamber also passed legislation authorizing a $106,173,831 Army housing program, which still must obtain House sanction.

19 Vessels Planned.

The deficiency measure, including nearly $6,000,000 for other naval purposes and $2,721,875 for military activities of the War Department, would permit work to begin on 19 vessels for the sea forces. Two 35,000-ton battleships, to cost $141,700,000; two light cruisers, seven auxiliary vessels and experimental craft for a "mosquito" fleet are provided.

An initial appropriation of $18,050,000 was recommended for these ships, the total cost of which was estimated at $312,035,500.

Funds totaling $19,752,000 for improvements at navy yards and shore stations would also be made under the terms of the bill. Of the amount $1,000,000 would be used to begin construction of a drydock at the Puget Sound Navy Yard. Expenditure of $415,000 to improve the power plant and $100,000 for modernization of electric distribution in shops at the Navy Yard here also is listed.

The measure also provides $500,000 to complete the plant of Model Testing Basin, Carderock, Md., and $122,000 for the purchase of land for safety zones and the construction of officers' quarters at the Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.

Dirigible Move Rejected.

The committee turned down requests for $1,175,000 to start a new aircraft carrier and $500,000 for beginning construction of a dirigible for experimental purposes.

Rear Admiral William G. DuBose, chief of the Navy Bureau of Construction and Repair, said while testifying before the committee that competition would be conducted among private shipbuilders for designs to be compared with those the Navy has worked out.

The Navy is anxious to develop satisfactory craft like the 19 projected ships so that in a national emergency they could be produced speedily in large numbers by private industry, he explained.

The naval expansion bill authorized $15,000,000 for experimental work, which, DuBose said, probably would be spent over a period of five years.

He gave warning that the "shipbuilding industry is not today adequate to supply men for the work in prospect."

Skilled Men Lacking.

"The Maritime Commission's demands and the Navy Department's demands are such," he testified, "that there is no question but we will have delays in ship construction brought about by the lack of sufficient men in certain trades."

The construction chief said there were 35,882 mechanics employed in Navy yards, and estimated that by 1942, on the basis of the enlarged building program "about two and one-half times that many would be required, or about 90,000."

He said 3,000 additional men would be required by July 1, 1939, if the proposed new ships are started by that time.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, said the Navy proposed to begin construction of two new 35,000-ton battleships soon after July 1 and that two light cruisers will be started early in 1939.

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, told the committee that the large number of patrol plane crashes during fleet maneuvers was "to be expected" because crashes increased in proportion to the number of planes used.

Three Crews for Each Plane.

He said the number of patrol planes had doubled and the number of squadrons had increased from 10 to 18 in less than two years.

Cook denied a report that the planes involved in the crashes were in charge of inexperienced flyers.

The air chief expressed the belief that "material has gone far ahead of personnel with these big planes," and added:

"You are going to need in war time at least three crews for every long-range patrol plane in order to carry out continuous operations, because otherwise the material will outwear the personnel."

Rear Admiral Ben Morrell, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, told a sub-committee that "due in large part to the lack of adequate facilities, the shipbuilding program has been retarded and the delivery of ships is not keeping pace with the anticipated program."

In addition to the $19,752,000 recommended by the Appropriations Committee for expenditures on navy yards and shore stations to provide proper facilities for the shipbuilding program, officials said they expected to get $975,000 of relief funds for labor on some of the projects.

By the Associated Press.

Deficiency Bill to House.

A $274,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill, including funds to begin the big Navy program, dropped into the lap of the House yesterday, bearing the Appropriation Committee's O. K.

Apart from naval funds, major items in the bill were $94,285,404 to restore capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation to $100,000,000; $40,561,886 to refund social security taxes to States which did not have unemployment compensation laws in effect prior to December 31, 1936, and $50,000,000 for processing tax refunds.

Shortly after the bill reached the House floor, Representative Taber (Republican) New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, declared its enactment would bring total appropriations for this session to almost $13,500,000,000 and create a deficit of $8,000,000,000 in the next fiscal year.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Folks, Facts, Fun.

Anent the post-mortems on the Iowa New Deal fatality: For several days prior to the primary wise heads on the Hill said Senator Gillette would trim the political hair of Wearin. They said they were positive, had something definite to base the prediction on, and here is what it was:

They "knew" Gillette would win when Senator Clyde Herring, of Iowa, indorsed him. Herring, they considered, is one of the most cautious men on the floor. He won't say that an ear of Iowa corn is an ear of Iowa corn until he has seen it, felt it, eaten it and digested it. Further, he knows every stalk of corn in Iowa and every farmer who grows it; he knows every crossroad and the people in the cities and the towns and the backwoods. He knows them better than they know themselves.

So when Herring—who was one-time Governor and knows his State—broke the rule of a long lifetime and said something like: "I would vote for Gillette," the wise heads on the Hill said:

"Gillette will win. Herring never would have said what he did if it wasn't in the bag—because he isn't the kind of man to pick a horse until the horse is just as good as 50 lengths out in front."

Notes.

Thanks to Alex J. Wertis, of the Naval Research Laboratory, Anacostia Station, for his courteous note regarding last Sunday's Federal Diary. We are keeping the picture and will return it if so requested. . . . One of our agents in the Forest Service sends in a delightful account of how District Officer Johnston (Forest Service) upheld the finest traditions of not only a man but the well-thought-of Government agency he works for:

It seems that the Edwards County, Kansas, Farm Bureau was about to hold its monthy stag dinner. The good ladies of the community were to have prepared the feast. But when the time came they had abandoned the job. It isn't known here why they failed the duty; it would make too long a story for speculation; no one ever knows what a woman will do. But, in the pinch and the crisis—when all members of the Farm Bureau had appeared and no meal was for them, District Officer Johnston leaped into the breach. He donned a chef's uniform, approached the stove with a surprising technique and within a reasonable time the Farm Bureau members were eating meatballs and spaghetti, hard rolls and banana salad, roast beef, pickles, sliced tomatoes, mashed potatoes. When it was finished, he took off his chef's dress and lectured on the benefits of forest conservation.

If you're in the Department of Commerce, have you gotten the promotions you think your capabilities and length of service deserve? Have you been there a long time, but, somehow, continue in the same old rut? Such questions will be asked in a questionnaire that was circularized yesterday in Commerce by U. F. W. A. Local 23. The object is to get cross-section of employe sentiment on the Department's promotion policy for presentation to the Secretary. The local thinks this a fair means of approaching a problem that, it is claimed, is of topmost importance in the big building. It will show precisely what the employes think of the promotions system and afford exact data on the chances a man or woman has of getting somewhere in the Department. Further, when the facts are finally presented to the Secretary, it can not be claimed that a loud-mouthed committee is talking. The accumulated facts, as set down by the employes themselves, will do the talking. The questionnaries were distributed yesterday at the cafeteria from 11:30 to 1:30 p. m. The same hours will be observed today.

Fandangle.

New I. D. R. A. fandangle: All June brides and couples thoughout the Federal departments, the Capitol and the District government who have been married this month and prior to the date of the I. D. R. A. dance on the 17th will be honored with free admission. A grand march will be led by the brides and bridegrooms. There will be "June moon decorations and lighting effects of romantic aspects." The decorations will be arranged by Merle S. Sager, of the National Park Service. The occasion marks the first social gathering of the two recently combined Interior and PWA recreational associations. The arrangements committee from Interior includes: Mrs. Eleanor Reid, Marguerite Hayes, Eleanor Mills, Bernice Norris, Eva Atwood, Elizabeth Oswald, Edith Noyes, Henry Praeger, Hilton Tinsley, Jack Hennessey, Charles H. Graham, Tommy Hampton, Marion C. Sedberry, Edward Stiles, Samuel H. Barrett, Evelyn Adams and A. M. Reising. The committee from the PWA includes: J. L. Acuff, Ingham Mack, Janet Jackson, Dorothy Wilson, Catherine Lester, Edna Schwarz, Louise Kayser and Dorothy Richardson.

Hikes Shortened.

Agriculture employes have revived their hiking club, "and good times are promised members," we hear from Miss Lucile Batts, the club secretary. "Shorter hikes are arranged for those who shudder at too much exercise," she adds . . . The Association of Non-Classified Federal Employes of America will hurl a dance Friday evening (10 to 1) in the Annapolis Hotel. Also, the association meets at 8:30 this evening at the Hayloft, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest. "The new year looks very promising for the enactment of legislation favorable to our cause," the announcement states. . . . The other day Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. president, asserted:

"The amendment to the relief bill offered by Rush Holt, which provides for civil service status for all emergency administrative employes by means of qualifying examinations, is an excellent step in the expansion of the merit system. The inclusion in the civil service of these workers who have proved their value to the Government and who prove their ability through qualifying examinations, is of value to the public service. While the U. F. W. A. has hoped that the merit system could be extended to all civilian personnel we welcome any step in that direction. We hope that this step will be taken and that it will be immediately followed by further steps to expand the merit system to cover all Federal workers . . ."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

"Yellow Jack" Is Heroic Drama As Presented in New Film Form

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Screen Version Preserves Vital Elements of Original; Hero Pays Visit; That Cornerstone; Jottings.

SIDNEY HOWARD'S play of "Yellow Jack"—written in collaboration with Paul de Kruif, upon whose original work of "Microbe Hunters" it is founded—has been given new realism in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization, unspooled for a scant majority of the drama desks in the Twentieth Century-Fox theaterette yesterday afternoon.

BELL.

The scope of the screen being what it is, no rigid comparison between the stage play and the film drama can be made with fairness. While the cinema has retained the full flavor of the sacrificial and heroic aspects of the play fashioned by Playwright Howard, it also has expanded a character or two, for the sake of a romantic interest, absent from the original, and has interpolated comedy scenes to leaven the seriousness of a skillfully documented recital of one of the greatest achievements of medical science—the conquering of yellow fever at the close of the Spanish-American War in Cuba.

There are moments when the element of comedy seems a little too obtrusive to be in complete harmony with the spirit of the picture, but these slightly magnified sops to "audience appeal" are so few and far between that they result in no serious impairment of the play's major theme or purpose.

Quite as much stress has been laid in the picture upon the heroism of the volunteers who became "human guinea pigs," upon whom the doctors performed their ominous experiments, as upon the unswerving devotion to duty and humanity displayed by the medical unit under the command of Maj. Walter Reed. These characters in the camera drama have been fashioned to represent the five soldiers who actually volunteered to risk their lives while the United States' khaki-clad Army still was on the island.

Aside from the roles of Gen. Wood, Maj. Reed and Gen. Gorgas, the ranking officers heroically engaged in the pursuit of the cause and cure of "yellow jack," there is another part that stands out in stellar eminence in "Yellow Jack." This is the part of Sergt. John O'Hara, played by Robert Montgomery with the same easy brogue and flippant manner first revealed in his impersonation of the disarming young murderer in "Night Must Fall." Virginia Bruce, cast opposite Mr. Montgomery, molds the character of the young nurse along lines that are vastly different from those of her frequently "hard-berled" characters in earlier films. It will be difficult to recognize her as the tipsy chorus girl in "The Great Ziegfeld," for example.

Miss Bruce's is one of the roles in the play that has been conspicuously "built up" for purposes of the screen. But even with this and the other permissible liberties that have been taken with Mr. Howard's original script, "Yellow Jack" remains a drama that leaves a lasting impression of integrity, honesty and reverence for the tremendously moving topic of which it primarily treats.

Those whose memories can reach as far back into the past as 1898 will encounter an acute nostalgia in the musical score contrived for "Yellow Jack" by Dr. William Axt. Into his brass-band backgrounds he has woven snatches of the most popular songs of the Spanish-American War period. It doesn't seem that long ago that "The Blue and the Gray," "Good-Bye, Dolly, I Must Leave You," "On the Banks of the Wabash" and "Just Break the News to Mother" were the hit tunes of the day. Remember those moonlight nights when you used to sing them, jogging back from the buggy ride? As I say, it seems no longer ago than the year they built the pyramids!

• • • •

And as long as we are on the subject, we might as well get the whole thing cleared up—until Saturday morning's review, that is.

John R. Kissinger, Spanish-American War veteran and one of the five courageous soldiers who volunteered to receive the yellow fever mosquito's potentially deadly bite during Maj. Walter Reed's fight against yellow fever 40 years ago, will visit Washington today as guest of Senator Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana. One suspects from his citations in the War Department's records that Mr. Kissinger was the real-life original of the hero portrayed in the picture of "Yellow Jack" by Robert Montgomery.

He is a native of Huntington, Ind., which accounts in a measure for Senator Van Nuy's interest. Maj. Reed described him as "having performed" the greatest single act of courage and service in Army annals."

Mr. Kissinger will fly here from his home in Huntington and will be a guest at the Willard Hotel. He is 62 years of age and was a member of Company D of the 157th Indiana Volunteer Infantry in the Spanish-American War, and later joined the U. S. Hospital Corps. When the call for volunteers to help Maj. Reed came, he accepted the challenge because he couldn't get to the front and wanted action. Mr. Kissinger, furthermore, is said to have furnished Sidney Howard with much of the data on which the play of "Yellow Jack" was based.

The Indiana delegation in both Houses of Congress will participate in the festivities planned in Mr. Kissinger's honor. Tomorrow he will be guest of honor at a luncheon in the Senate restaurant and on Friday night will be honor guest at the premiere Washington showing of "Yellow Jack," at Loew's Capitol Theater.

When Ethelreda Leopold, chosen by her associates in the "Gold Diggers in Paris" chorus as the prettiest, most talented and most popular one of their number, comes to town today she will meet what is popularly supposed to be the exact antithesis of the "gold digger" type—the so-called "home girl." The "home girl," in this case, will be Elinor Lee, staff home economics expert, of broadcasting station WJSV. They will meet in an interview on Mrs. Lee's daily home economics program over the air at 2 p. m.—provided Miss Leopold gets away from that 1 o'clock press luncheon, at the Washington, in time.

And speaking of luncheons, a delightful, al fresco one was spread by W. E. S. Wilcox for some half-hundred guests under the waving trees in the spacious gardens of Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern yesterday afternoon at 12, preliminary to the laying of the cornerstone at 1, or thereabouts, of Mr. Wilcox's new Silver Theater and Commercial Center at Georgia avenue and Colesville pike, in Silver Spring, Md. There could have been no more beautiful a setting or a more delicious lunch.

The new Silver Theater project is a surprisingly expansive undertaking. The theater itself will be a capacious one and the shopping center, fronting on Georgia avenue, gives every promise of being a small city in itself. It is reputedly the most pretentious enterprise of its kind in either the State of Maryland or the District of Columbia.

Among yesterday's guests at the luncheon and the later ceremonies attending the laying of the cornerstone were State Senator Stedman Prescott, who troweled the cornerstone into place; County Commissioner Paul Coughlan, County Treasurer Forest Walker, John Eberson, noted New York architect, who designed the development, and Mrs. Eberson; Lacey Shaw, chairman of the park commissioners; Winship Green, president of the Silver Spring Business Men's Association; J. K. Cissel, president of the Silver Spring National Bank; Irving Root, chief surveyor for the park commissioners, and Mrs. Root, Kemp Mohler, in charge of the construction of the new property; Mrs. Brooke Lee, representative of Washington's foremost motion picture interests and the drama desks of the local press.

If the Silver proves as much of a success as yesterday's observances in honor of its erection, it will be an overwhelming triumph for both "Willie" Wilcox and Silver Spring.

• • • •

Two or three hundred years from now, when Mr. Wilcox tears down the Silver to make way for a more imposing coliseum, he will find reminders of yesterday's goings-on. Sealed into the cornerstone yesterday was a strong copper box in which was inclosed documentary evidence of the occasion, in the form of newspaper clippings, statistical data and personal tributes from officials and members of the press. Wonder how they will look—and sound—200 or 300 years from now?

Keith's Plans World Premiere For Darrieux' 'Rage of Paris'

"Danielle Darrieux!"

It put 3,000 men and women to work at Universal studios—skilled technicians, carpenters, designers, painters, property men, fashion artists, seamstresses, film editors, cameramen, writers—and provided jobs for hundreds of extra players in her debut film, "The Rage of Paris," which, through special arrangements, is to have its world premiere at RKO-Keith's on Thursday night, June 16, at 8 p. m.

That signature (very round and bold for such a diminutive signer) placed on the dotted line of that lucrative long-term contract, marked the pinnacle, to date, of one of the most amazing careers in the fabulous history of the motion pictures. A few years ago, Danielle Darrieux was a 14-year-old girl in a quiet Parisian neighborhood, reading her schoolbooks and practicing the violoncello. Then, by sheer inspiration, she answered an ad in a newspaper for a child actress in a film, "Le Bal," and miraculously landed the job.

From that evolved a triumphant screen parade; one hit film after another. Star role on star role, culminating with the prize-winning "Mayerling." A whirlwind courtship and marriage at 17 to Henry Decoin, one of France's leading scenarists and dramatists; a debut on the Paris stage; now, Hollywood stardom at 21.

"What is this meteoric young person like?" it may be asked. "What is the secret of her astonishing success?"

The answer is that she is young, vibrantly alive and completely without affectation. She has put her career ahead of every personal interest, sidestepped all social affairs to concentrate upon her work. She has gray-green eyes, copper-bronze hair and a delicately formed figure which tips the scales at 110 pounds. She was born in Bordeaux, France, on May 1, 1917.

Harold Lloyd Meets Censors And Wins Case

Horn-Rimmed Comedian Also Has Troubles With Shriners.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 7.—A new kind of censorship, designed to maintain the public's peace rather than its morals, came to light today in connection with Harold Lloyd's new picture, "Professor Beware."

Lloyd, perhaps the only star in Hollywood who never has had any censorship trouble, was surprised when Will Hays' official verbotener told him that one scene of his movie would have to be deleted.

"Which?" Lloyd demanded.

"The one where you are driving down the street and bump into a fire engine," the censor replied. "That's the one where you tell the firemen there's a fire at the pier and you yell 'fire!'"

"What's wrong with that?' Lloyd demanded.

"Its dangerous for any actor on the screen to say 'fire,'" the Hays man explained. "Twice on record there has been trouble about it. Both times somebody was at the box office buying a ticket, heard the scream 'fire' inside, and rushed out for the fire department."

Laughter an Extinguisher.

This censorial demand flabbergasted Lloyd and all his helpers. The fire department scene was one of the big moments in their picture and its elimination would have ruined the plot. They managed to save it by some ultra-quick thinking. They told the censor that he'd seen the picture in the projecting room, with nobody to laugh but himself, which he didn't.

"But in the theater," they said with faces straight, "the scene is funny and the audience is laughing so hard that nobody can hear the word 'fire.'"

The censor fell for that and gave Lloyd an okay. The picture is yet to be previewed and probably won't be released until fall so we can't report how funny it is. If we hear Lloyd say "fire," though, we're going to write Hays a letter.

Shriner Trouble.

Lloyd, incidentally, is wearing a red fez these days and is the most harried man in town. He's head of the entertainment committee for the Shrine convention. He's got 25,000 brothers in town, with their wives and daughters, and they all want to be entertained—by going through the movie studios.

Weeks ago the studio publicity chiefs put their heads together and decided that no Shriner would get inside a sound stage, on the theory that if one walked in, soon there would be 25,000 of them tramping by while Gable made love to Loy.

That put Lloyd on the horns of a dilemma. He did some more quick thinking. Wednesday night he will be master of ceremonies at the Coliseum at an "electrical pageant" produced and financed by the movie makers.

Each studio will produce four of its top stars, who will ride around the arena in open touring cars, one at a time, so that all the Shriners can have a look. Then each star will make a speech over the loudspeakers and if the brothers aren't satisfied with that, Lloyd will give up.

Have Own Fun.

The Shriners, meantime, seem to be doing pretty well providing their own entertainment. Islam Temple of San Francisco is disrupting traffic with a dragon 100 feet long and with 100 men inside to make it go. Wisconsin Shriners are giving children free rides on their fleet of camels; some of the other lodges have elephants, while Zor Temple of Madison actually has a neon-lighted marching unit.

All this may, or may not, make up for a look inside a movie studio. It long has been our contention that the film makers are entirely too stuffy in their attitude toward tourists. Virtually every other big business in the country lets visitors inside to see the wheels go around. Even the Dionne quintuplets have a runway, glazed with one-way glass, through which tourists can see and not be seen.

It seems to us that the studios could take a pointer from the Quins. There is no good reason why they couldn't put similar glassed corridors in their principal stages, so that a steady stream of visitors could have a peak at their idols in action.

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 7.—What a breezy entertaining comedy William A. Seiter directed in "Three Blind Mice." You'll not have headaches over this, either in trying to unravel the plot (simple enough for little sister to see through) or from an overdose of sophistication. It flows, not like black jack molasses, but like bubble water.

HEDDA HOPPER

Loretta Young, looking her prettiest in becoming clothes and oozing sex appeal—mercy! David Niven sustaining his reputation for light comedy, and Joel McCrea looking exactly as he did at the Beach Club, where he kept in training by teaching the youngster how to swim. Joel will never be a great actor, but he's sweet, clean and a fine example of American boyhood.

Whether he plays a bashful hero or a bar mixer, Stu Erwin is always good. The big surprise was Binnie Barnes' comedy performance, because for years they've been hiding her light under those meanie heavy parts.

Marjorie Weaver and Pauline Moore were as pretty as the star but weren't given the same opportunity.

Rather an unusual situation about David Niven. He left town just as Merle Oberon returned. Now the studio has cabled him to return to play her fiance—not in real life again, but in the picture, "The Cowboy and the Lady." This is the second time he's been a friend in need for the lady. We're wondering if he'll obey this summons.

This is certainly the land of milk and honey for former wives. They take everything but the gold fillings from the bridegroom's teeth.

Quite a price Sam Katz paid his wife because he called her "stupid." Settlement proved she was anything but. She got $10,000 cash, $15,000 coming—and $1,400 a month. Which should keep the wolf from the door for a couple of minutes!

And Rhea Gable has received well nigh a quarter of a million dollars but hasn't yet given Clark his freedom. Maybe she's really waiting for the gold fillings.

Biggest settlement ever made by an actor was Doug Fairbanks to Beth Sully, when he wanted to marry our Mary. Beth got a half million and a hundred thousand in trust for Doug, jr. Which was all the money Doug, sr. had at that time. She would have made more had she been willing to take a percentage on his future earnings, which ran well over the 5,000,000 mark.

There's no hint of commercialism in Hollywood's latest separation—the Walter Pidgeons. Just one of those things where they've been drifting apart. So far, no divorce in the air. She moved to an apartment, feeling he'd be happier in his own home, which he bought long before she became Mrs. Pigeon.

When Conrad Nagel went to visit Joan Fontaine on the set at R K O, Joan asked the director's permission, who said, "Okay, wheel him in." Joan was the first to laugh and has been repeating the story ever since.

Pierce Hall

A large number of avid theatergoers evidently still belong to the Goldsmith school of thought and are able to enjoy an amusing play that has survived through almost two centuries. Whoever may have advanced the idea that Goldsmith's rare old comedy of "School for Scandal" has become a mere museum piece should have attended its performance in Pierce Hall last night.

Pupils of S. E. Cochran's National Academy of Stage Training offered a worthy performance of the old play under the skill'ful direction of George Vivian, with Dorothy Martin serving in the capacity of assistant director.

Mr. Vivian did more than direct the play. He himself appeared in the richly comic part of Tony Lumpkin, and was, of course, the only thoroughly seasoned actor in the play.

Mr. Cochran last evening announced the forthcoming opening of a summer course of stage training, which opens a ten-week season on June 20, at Olney, Md. This will be conducted in conjunction with the Olney Theater project, now well under way, at the new location between Olney and Ashton.

Thousands Are Busy on Year's Film Program

Nearly 5,000 employes, players and executives are engaged in preparing, filming and editing a record number of pictures at the Hollywood studios of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

Set building, dress and costume making, furniture turning and other work on a dozen pictures have reached a high mark for the past 12 months, with 1,500 back-lot and technical employes engaged.

During the past two weeks an increase of 50 per cent has been shown in number of grips, laborers, painters, carpenters and other artisans, T. Keith Glennan, operations manager, announced.

A total of 150 grips and nearly that many laborers alone are being used in construction work.

One of the largest sets constructed at Paramount since "The Crusades" was finished this week for Frank Lloyd's "If I Were King," starring Ronald Colman. This is a reproduction of part of Medieval Paris of Francois Villon's day.

More than 100 pieces of furniture are being made, while the wardrobe workroom is employing 75 women to turn out nearly 100 elaborate silk court gowns.

Plans are under way for erection of a huge replica of the Paris exposition for the new Jack Benny-Joan Bennett production, "Artists and Models Abroad," which Arthur Hornblow will produce, with Mitchell Leisen directing.

Several location sets are being readied for the Technicolor cavalcade of the air, "Men With Wings," produced and directed by William A. Wellman and featuring Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell.

Sets, costumes and properties for "Paris Honeymoon," the Bing Crosby-Franciska Gaal production, are being readied for the cameras to start next week.

In the half-way stage of production are "Spawn of the North" and "Sing, You Sinners," and nearing completion are "Give Me a Sailor" and "Prison Farm."

Soon to be released and in the final editing and scoring stages are "Tropic Holiday," "You and Me" and the Harold Lloyd production, "Professor, Beware!"

Patricia Borrowed For Henie Picture

So well was Patricia Wilder's work liked at Twentieth Century-Fox that Darryl F. Zanuck has arranged to borrow her again from RKO. This time she will go in the cast in support of Sonja Henie in the skating star's latest picture, "My Lucky Star."

Patricia was first borrowed for the Shirley Temple picture, "Little Miss Broadway," which has just been completed. She becomes part of a cast which includes Richard Greene, Cesar Romero, Buddy Ebsen and George Barbier. Direction was assigned to Roy Del Ruth, who was so successful with Sonja Henie's last picture, "Happy Landing."

With more than 400 members and guests present, the fourth annual outing of the Washington Real Estate Board held yesterday at Bay Ridge, Md., set a new high for attendance and success. Assembling at board headquarters, 1417 K street northwest, at 12:30 p. m., the main body of realtors and guests formed a motor party and was escorted to the scene of the event by Metropolitan and Maryland police.

The day's sports program opened with a golf tournament at 9 a. m. Fully 60 golfers competed for The Washington Post Cup and other prizes in the tourney, which included handicap, blind bogey and low gross contests. Swimming events, races, baseball and horseshoe pitching made up the rest of the sports schedule. A buffet dinner was served in the evening. Special entertainment was furnished through the courtesy of Wayne Kendrick and prizes were awarded following the dinner.

The invited guest list included Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland; Senator William H. King, of Utah; Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner; Francis G. Dr. Byrd Appeals To Cadets to Keep American Ideals

Charlotte Hall, Md., June 7.—Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, asked members of the graduating class at Charlotte Hall Military Academy at the institution's 164th commencement exercises this morning to be faithful to the "ideals and principles" under which the Nation has prospered.

"Let us remember," he said, "that in this country we have better living conditions than exist anywhere else on earth. Let us be loyal to the democratic form of government which has provided those conditions."

Introduced by Col. B. F. Crowson, the institution's principal, as a potential governor of Maryland, Dr. Byrd declared he wouldn't give up the University of Maryland permanently for "all the governorships in the United States."

Ex-Mayor, Clerk Held for Slaying

Twin Falls, Idaho, June 7 (U.P.).—Duncan M. Johnston, 39, former Twin Falls mayor, and his jewelry store clerk, William La Vonde, 58, were charged with murder today in the slaying May 24 of George L. Olson, Salt Lake City jewelry salesman, who was shot in the neck, slugged and robbed.

Part of the jewelry was found in Johnston's Twin Falls Store, police said. The former mayor contended the salesman left the samples for safe-keeping. Johnson maintained he was innocent.

Water for Firefighting Here Urged by Senate

The Senate yesterday passed a bill authorizing the chief of Army engineers to negotiate with communities near the National Capital for the use of unfiltered water from supply conduits along Conduit road for emergency firefighting.

D. W. Holton, superintendent of the District Water Division, said last night his department had "no objection" to the measure. He said water from the conduits had never been used to fight fires in suburban towns in the past.

First Lady Gives Plaque For Her 'Public Service'

New York, June 7.—Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, heard Paul H. Kahan, New York University senior, assert in a class day address here today that "the boys are prepared to lay down their caps and gowns and accept the pick and shovel of the WPA."

Mrs. Roosevelt, acting for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, accepted a bronze plaque inscribed to the President's wife for distinguished public service.

Miss Harrison to Be Wed.

Baltimore, June 7 (A.P.).—Miss Sally Cary Fairfax Harrison, daughter of the late Fairfax Harrison, former president of the Southern Railway, and Dr. Gerhard H. Dieke, associate professor of physics at the Johns Hopkins University, will be married tomorrow. The wedding will be at her home, Belvoir, in Fauquier County, Va. The couple obtained the license at Warrenton, Va., yesterday.

The Navy Department announced yesterday that contract for planes involving $1,900,000 has been awarded to the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, Long Island City, N. Y.

Swanky clothes will divide the picture with beautiful girls on the Powhatan Roof next Wednesday, June 15. For there's to be a summer style parade. It will have the snap of a military parade, the color of a circus parade. Your best gal will love it. Clothes will be from the Connecticut avenue shop of Anna Mae Nichols. Sports and evening things mostly. No lingerie. Sorry, boys.

A new and too, too important Capital composer of popular music is none other than the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison, son of Thomas Alva Edison.

Secretary Edison's song is called "Don't Ask Nothing of Me" and its hearers say it has a fine swing of the "Old Man River" type. As yet, it's been played only by the Marine Band. The arrangement was made by Larry Kendrick, who plays the organ so masterfully at the Hay-Adams House. The Secretary can't wrote a note of music, but he has the composer's flair. All Larry had to do was to write down the melody.

D'you want to hear those entrancing tunes from "Pins and Needles?" 'Course you do. The only way to do it in this man's town is to go up to Madrillon and listen to Johnny Shaw's outfit. Johnny's miking of "Sing Me a Song of Social Significance" is something for musical epicures.

Holdovers, naturally, are Manno and Strafford at the Lotus. But this may be your last week to see these tapping dancers. Chicago is calling for them. Kathleen O'Neil, formerly with NTG, does easy high-kicking, Johnny and Joy Armstrong work themselves into a lather with dancing acrobatics.

A flock of honeys are the Lenora Co-Eds, Lotus' new singing-dancing chorus. They all look as though they'd been born this morning.

New rainbows will shortly blaze in Hamilton's rainbow room, due to be done over and done up at no end of expense and artistry. Pillars are to be veneered with mirrors and a modernistic neon iris lighting scheme will make nature's rainbows seem amateurish beside Hamilton's rainbow.

By dint of meticulous figgerin' and 24-hour shifts, the Hamilton management plans to effect this transformation with only a four-day closedown.

Wardman's Metronome Room will lean heavily on the "sweet' side beginning Friday, June 20, when Johnny Slaughter and his six-piece dance orchestra take over for the summer. Johnny's music is Lombardo-ish, romantic, and will probably be responsible for no end of l'amour.

Meantime, Paul Kain's many admirers are practically busting their arteries in an effort to enjoy all dancing possible to Kain music during the rest of his stay.

Sex rears its lovely head, and acrobatically, on the Shoreham Terrace this week with Lucile and La Verne dancing the romance of a lovely South Seastress and a beachcomber. It's a rough romance but love is like that—they say. Deglamorizing note? La Trianita, premier castanetter, is really Sally McLean, of New York. But she was born in Spain. Dick and Leota Nash continue to rope onlookers with fancy Texas roping.

Is it Reno or Joe Jackson at the Bamboo Gardens this week? oldtimers will say, rubbing their eyes. But Reno says that he originated the act made famous by Joe Jackson in vaudeville. Anyhow, it's one of the best. Those clowning tricks of emcee Leo Lisee give a running start to other good acts—Carolyn Dyne, toe tapper and too pretty (just look at pic above); O'Donnell and Loye, topsters, too; canary Judith Gates, who goes over the high notes like a hunter over a gate.

Tom Gentry and his orchestra bring flaming color to Glen Echo, not only in swing-sweet music, but you oughta see the lads' red monkey jackets. Ex-cowboy Gentry treats Glen Echo to its first triple-tongued cornetist, Bob King. This triple-tongue tootling must be heard. It defies description.

When Mayfair's atmosphere has warmed the cockles of your heart—when Chris Tremayne's mellow soprano, Perry Martin's soothing barytone, and Dio Data's pianissimo have made you carefree as the celebrated lark—ah, that is the time, mes amis, to peer boldly into the future.

Underwood & Underwood.

MILTON DAVIS, who leads the Rainbow Room Orchestra. Upper—Carolyn Dyne, the Bamboo Garden's glamour girl who toe taps.

Countess Helene de Bournet is Mayfair's official prognosticator of what's going to happen to you, and you. And has she got a hawkseye view of the future! She foretold two events to us on Saturday that happened by Tuesday! (But thanks be, that bad tempered brunette hasn't crossed our path—yet. We're expecting her any minute.)

Get Clyde Kissinger, of Anchor Room's "We Two," to tell you about his adventures as a kid musician. Especially about his trip through Texas with a 14-piece orchestra and girl trio in an antique bus. Every time the bus climbed a hill, the trumpet section would get out carrying rocks to put under the back wheels in case the motor stopped, which it did—and often. When this motorized ark got stuck in the Ozarks, all hands, including the girls, got out and pushed. "Great days!" says Clyde, "Heaven send they never come back."

Now that hot and happy days are here again, you should know that one of the coolest spots in town is a table by the fountain in the Mayflower Lounge. Between the tinkling fountain and the tingling Sidney music, it's better than Omar's Paradise.

You probably think you'd know a familiar tune, no matter in what language it was sung. But we saw several melody lovers, including one professional musician, fooled when Vincente del Garza sung "In a Little Gypsy Tea Room" in Spanish in the King Cole Room the other night.

Composite of a convention and the Chicago fire: The Hi-Hat at midnight with Dick Reger head waitering and hill billying all over the place; Jack Hood shining that "Manikoura Moon" on the piano; Libby Frazier going sweet then swing-y with things like "Lovelight and Starlight;" and the customers, bless them, dipping their noses.

A cruise on Show Boat (Baltimore boulevard) reveals an interior as smart as that of a luxury liner. The dancing room is all done up in cheering blue and yellow with lighting via ship lanterns. There's a big, cool cocktail room paneled in pale woods with a bar measuring about 6 furlongs, we think. Those Three Dees and Sallie Smith do the dipsy-doodling.

Eating, properly understood, is an art said Brilliant-Savarin. Or was it Oscar of the Waldorf? Does it matter? The important fact is that every item on the Griffith Farms menu is a work of art, lovely to look at, better to eat. Happy Walker's zazz-u-zazz on Saturdays and a Hawaiian Trio on all other eves.

Brinkley's recipe for a successful evening: Warm yo'se'f up by spinning to Jack Torrey's swing and then cool off gently with one of those tall Hawaiian coolers.

Policeman Kills Wife.

Chicago, June 7 (U.P.).—A policeman, who trailed his wife to a rendezvous with another man, shot and killed her as she entered an automobile on a busy Loop corner tonight, wounded the man, and then surrendered to police. The policeman was John Lewe.

House Committee To Investigate Big Spy Ring in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday a special House committee to investigate "un-American activities" would study charges that an "extensive foreign spy system" exists in the United States.

"We have received many letters stating that foreign governments are spending an awful lot of money for subversive activities over here," he said.

Speaker Bankhead selected Representatives Dies, Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico; Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama; Moyier (Democrat), of Ohio; Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, and Mason (Republican), of Illinois, yesterday to make the inquiry. The House authorized the investigation last week. Dies said the committee would meet Friday to prepare for the inquiry.

Driver Testing Expert Will Address Meeting

Earl Allgaier, American Automobile Association authority on "driver testing," will be the guest speaker tonight at 8 p. m. of the Washington Safety Group in the conference room of the Department of Labor. The group is composed of professional accident prevention experts employed in this city.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Persons Who Can't Find Friends And Diversions Here Couldn't Find Them Anywhere, Says Woman.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recent letters from feminine Government workers who complain of lack of recreational opportunities in Washington flabbergast me. It has been, and is, my contention that more and better, free or inexpensive, diversions are afforded Washingtonians than are to be found in any other city in the world. Furthermore, due to the preponderance of women, the custom of women going about unescorted is so generally accepted that no woman need feel any hesitancy about setting forth alone, even in the evening, which might not be true in a smaller city. I was not married when I came here in 1933 (although I am married today) and I knew comparatively few persons, yet my only complaint (if I had wished to make one, which I didn't) would have been that I hadn't enough time outside office hours to take advantage of all the opportunities offered.

• • • •

The trouble with these complainants, as I see it, is that they are introverts who would have difficulty making friends and planning diversions no matter what city they lived in. It is absurd of them to expect Uncle Sam to act as their social sponsor, in addition to all his other weighty duties. Any woman with the slightest initiative can quickly draw around her a few congenial friends to share her enthusiasms. Few Government offices or boarding houses are so limited in scope that they do not offer some possibilities.

• • • •

While it might be awkward to ask one man to share one's social plans, it is certainly easy to ask two men and another woman to make up a weekly foursome at bridge. It is just as easy to make up a weekly foursome for tennis. Even without a country club for Government workers, such as "Marguerite" (your correspondent of June 5), suggested, there are plenty of public golf courses where anyone can play for a reasonable fee. A number of moderate-salaried persons from my office play on these courses every week-end, sharing the cost of transportation so that the outing is inexpensive. The Sunday hiking groups offer both companionship and exercise for the hardy.

• • • •

Aside from these routine diversions there are what, to me, appear to be really exciting possibilities of Washington—the concerts, lectures, exhibitions of paintings, sculpture, rare manuscripts, etc. Some of the most interesting are free, and even the most widely publicized can be inexpensively enjoyed. Plays and concerts can be seen from balcony seats, and many of my women acquaintances go in pairs—to seats reserved for the season—at a cost not much more than that of a movie.

• • • •

The tragedy is that most of the complainers never even scratch the surface of the possibilities in Washington. Any Sunday paper outlines more activities than one person could embrace in a week. At this time of year, for instance, some of the most beautiful homes and gardens in Washington are open to the public at a small charge which goes to charity. Tours are planned for Saturday afternoon so Government workers can go, and they are always within easy access of street cars and buses.

• • • •

Just one last thing: "Marguerite" complains that no White House parties are given for women Government employes below executive status. If she really wants to go to a White House garden party she may ask her Congressman for an admittance card out of the many he is allotted. She'll probably get one. A great many minor employes visit the White House through this arrangement.

• • • •

Incidentally, "Marguerine" and a number of other women like her would be much happier and would spend less "money on doctors" if they got over the notion that "most women in the Government are too intelligent for their jobs." As a long-time director of a certain Federal division I have known few persons in the Government service who are too intelligent for their jobs. Intelligent persons, even when given dull, routine work, usually do that job so well that they are soon moved on to another which is better suited to their abilities. One of the greatest trials of the employer or director is that of having to deal with persons who feel too good for their jobs and therefore do those jobs badly, no matter how simple they may be. And I might add that the Government has more than its quota of persons with persecution complexes—many of whom asserted, when hired, that they would be eternally grateful for anything in the way of a job.

Sincerely, E. M. C.

"Horse to Water."

DEAR L. M. C.: Thank you for coming to my rescue in this matter of trying to convince bored and fretful women Government workers that one's social opportunities, always and everywhere, are commensurate with one's personal resoucefulness and social talents. Too many of them, it would seem, are waiting not only to be led to water, but to have the draught poured down their throats through a funnel, thereafter. M. H.

Stenographer's Say-So.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a stenographer in the Commerce Department and believe me I know whereof I speak when I say departmental recreation clubs are only for members of the younger generation, like myself. My boss is a lady, like "Marguerite," no doubt, and there is no place for these sweet gals in today's doings. We youngsters mow them down.

• • • •

We younger-generation Government workers have all the social life we need. The only thing that bothers us is the fact that married men seem to exist here in so much greater numbers than the unmarried ones. And I, for one, draw the line at married men . . . Your picture is pasted on my wall, between those of Westbrook Pegler and Rudy Vallee. I have a gallery of 52 pictures, and not one Roosevelt among them . . .

COMMERCE STENOG.

Smarties Dull Company.

DEAR C. S.: I have yet to see the brash and brittle youngster who can really outshine a mature woman in a social gathering, providing the latter has average endowment of health, intelligence and style-sense, and normal social experience, and providing the company includes just a few men whose interest in a given women is—from the discriminating feminine point of view—worth compelling.

• • • •

Of course, where the company is made up entirely of complacent young smart-alecks, chiefly remarkable for their lack of consideration of others' feelings, I daresay a gentlewoman would find herself at a painful disadvantage. However, she wouldn't be depriving herself of anything worth while in the way of social experience by judiciously excluding herself from the activities of such a group. (It's nice to hear—or are you spoofing me—that my picture is hung in such famous company.) M. H.

Slacks Return to Popularity

SLACKS have returned and, topped with shirts or halters, are giving shorts and skirts keen competition as America's leading play costume. The newest slacks, in keeping with the vogue for the more feminine in summer clothes of all kinds, are nicely fitted at the top and are a great improvement over those of several seasons ago. Note the front tucking to give a slim effect in the slacks here worn by Rita Hayworth, screen star. Belt and shirt buttons add a splash of color to the play costume, which is echoed in the beach sandals of woven cotton. An ideal ensemble for resort or country wear and appropriate for women of all ages.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

IT IS FAR from strange that most pieces emanating from this town concern ladies who are elbow-deep in the blue chips of fame and money, or else are headed that way. The Cinderella Success Story is the lambie-pie of the hour, as it has ever been. But I find deep interest and even refreshment in meeting and talking with the girls who bloom and blush almost unseen in this crowded hive.

ALICE HUGHES.

Take Patricia Rose Marie Cute, which she swears is on the level, who is an elevator chauffeur at a big department store. Patricia Etc. is a pleasant little girl who is sort of vague about what happens next. Swing music seems to be the most important factor in her life right now, and she tells me that the man she marries must be a hot dancer of the modern school. "Migosh," she says, "what else would we do evenings, read?" She has a dim notion of the stage, but that's vague, too. She gives $13 of her weekly $22 to her mother, and the rest goes for "little things." She's happy enough, and I suuspect it will be up and down—"Second floor—linens, blankets, woolens and luggage"—until the swell dancer comes along and snatches her into matrimony.

And I just met up with a prim, neat little woman named Mitzi Manna—or so she says—who looks like a schoolmarm, but actually is a sideshow barker at Palisades Amusement Park here. She quickly tired of office work, and during prohibition she delivered cases of demon rum for bootleggers, earning $5 a case. "Cops just couldn't believe a little girl could do anything wrong," she says, "and now, at the park, people seem to trust me because I look so mousy and innocent." And away she barks, lady-like, gray-haired and trustworthy at 28. Two girls out of the millions—not rich, not famous, just going along doing their little best! What price glamour girls?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Clare Boothe, rich and famous from the great feline play-hit, "The Women," has at last handed the script of her next to Producer Brock Pemberton, and the town anxiously awaits its unveiling next fall. It is like waiting to see what Bill Shakespeare will turn out to follow "Hamlet." All we know so far is that the show wears the punchy title of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," and that it will open the last week in September at Henry Miller's Theater. That night anything can and will happen, if Clare still packs that old knockout wallop, and why not?

• • • •

Note for the Revolution—our Mrs. George Blumenthal wears a 96-carat, pear-shaped diamond pendant on a plain platinum chain. This slab of ice is twice the size of Mrs. McLean's Hope diamond—but, of course, it hasn't the legend of hard luck and publicity. Hard luck and 96-carat rocks just wouldn't seem to be playmates—from here.

• • • •

Don't be surprised when you hear the traffic cop at Forty-fifth street and Broadway, in Times Square's heart, holler "Come on, children!" when the light changes. It's his habit for all ages—and, believe me, pedestrians in New York act as though they were still studying their A-B-Abs!

• • • •

One of your lady authors who sticks closely to the "right people" is Alice-Leone Moats, who wrote that "No Nice Girl Swears." Maybe she just likes the spotlight, then again she may be using these upper-case men and women as literary guinea-pigs. Lately she's been with the right people in Bermuda. Well, that's mighty nice work!

• • • •

When we step out in the summer evenings to dance at the country club or sit it out at a roof garden we can't do much better than dear old black chiffon. It not only looks cool, but is cool, and men adore that particular material. Ask for yourself, or show it around! A big, flat-crowned black hat goes very well with it, and the whole thing makes up an ensemble which just can't go wrong, this year or any other.

Home Accidents Can Be Avoided By Precautions

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

First aid in the home begins with prevention. Attention to the prevention of home accidents is more important than any other because they are more numerous; they are more frequent than automobile accidents, or industrial accidents, or outdoor accidents (including drownings) of all kinds.

The amazing figure of 5,658,500 accidents is given as the annual total of home accidents in the United States in 1936.

Half of all home accidents are caused by falls. Next most frequent are burns. Then follow cuts, wounds, asphyxiation, electrocution and carbon monoxide inhalation.

As to prevention: (1) Furniture out of place in a dark bedroom, (2) shoes in the middle of the floor and (3) buckets or brooms left on the kitchen steps—can all easily be avoided. But no matter how often we may warn people those examples of carelessness still occur.

Other good rules are:

Never leave pots containing hot foods on the stove where small children can upset them. (Dreadful scars on the face and chest are usually the consequence of neglecting this rule.)

Never leave anything boiling on the gas stove when someone is asleep.

The home medicine cabinet is the first aid station when an accident has occurred.

Advice is regularly sought as to what to put in the home medicine cabinet.

But, as my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, says, the more urgent advice concerns what to take out of the home medicine closet.

Take out that bottle of lotion that was prescribed for Susie's hives back in 1934. It sits there pathetically waiting for another case of the identical kind to break out in the family. Meanwhile the powder has sunk down to the bottom of the bottle and a somewhat pinky stained semiclear fluid remains on top. No one remembers exactly what it was originally used for; and there is no hint to be gained on the label of the bottle itself which reads austerely: "Apply locally." There, though, in spite of these obstacles to utility, it sits through the drums and tramplings of four spring housecleanings.

Surgical, sterile gauze, adhesive tape, a bottle of tincture of iodine for application to cuts, a bottle of boric acid solution for the eyes after dust storms and dusty rides, a tube of zinc oxide ointment for skin troubles, some oil spray for the nose; that is about all it is safe or healthy to leave in the medicine chest. Cathartics, digestive powders and old cough mixtures are best in the ash can. Worse for the ash can, but better for the family.

Don't Mix Stripes, Checks, Men Told

New York, June 5 (AP).—Bright colors and bold patterns are the rule for mens' sports wear this summer, but there are still a few principles to be observed if you want to be well-dressed and look better than average.

Don't mix your designs too much—keep stripes with stripes, checks with checks, and irregular figures with irregular figures. Too many straight lines and curved lines together jar the eye.

The rules of color harmony still apply, too. You can get away with wearing a bright green shirt with bright blue pants, but a far better combination would be gray pants with a green shirt or blue pants with a buff shirt. Colors that clash in bright shades usually go well together if both are in soft, neutral tones.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Commencement.

THE PREACHER was giving the invocation. She shut her eyes and listened to the chorus of life that drifted in the open window—the chirruping of birds, the droning of insects, the rustling of leaves. There was something sweetly sad about it all. Some day she would look back and remember this moment.

(She saw herself a singer in a tight-fitting, spangled gown standing on a concert stage bowing before the "bravos" of an audience. A great bouquet of roses was handed her . . . then another . . . and another. She bowed graciously, turned and led her tall, young, foreign-looking accompanist forward to share in the triumph. They backed away, hand in hand, bowing and smiling as the applause resounded.)

• • • •

The preacher had finished and two of the graduates were giving a piano duet. Her eyes wandered out over the audience. There was Mother, Dad, little sister Jane, Aunt Nannie, Uncle Joe, Cousin Sally—well, it was nice they could all be together. Maybe this would be the last time. She would be going away to college . . . and after that to study music in New York . . . or Paris. She felt Fate hovering ominously about her.

If only Mother could have had a new suit this spring. And that hat looked cheap. Dad was a little seedy, too, in his old blue serge. And Jane—well, poor kid, she needed everything. They had all sacrificed so for her—but then she would make it up to them some day.

(She saw herself sitting importantly at a desk writing out checks—checks to clear up the mortgage . . . to meet the note at the bank . . . the back taxes . . . to put on a new roof . . . make over the bathroom . . . get a new car . . . send Mother to see Aunt Susie in California . . . give Jane dancing lessons . . . make life easy and pleasant and free from pinching for all of them. Yes, just as soon as she won her big success.)

• • • •

The valedictory was under way. Bernice Marsh was giving it—cocksure and know-it-all, as usual. How that bunch irritated her—Bernice, Nancy Payne, Esther Martin . . . snooty, smarty, always trying to run everything. Thank goodness, she was getting away where she would associate with real people. And when she came back home famous she would certainly put them all in their place.

(She was speaking at a school banquet, the great singer—no, maybe she would be a great writer after what her English teacher said—well, anyway, she would be the famous alumna being welcomed home. All her old teachers, a little more faded in outline, would be crowding about her. The young students would be looking at her worshipfully. Bernice, Nancy, Esther, all the others, now fat, town housewives, would be lined up to shake hands with her.)

• • • •

The speaker of the day was in the full flood of his oratory. His phrases echoed sonorously in her ears—"youth can save civilization" . . . "the older generation has failed" . . . "the danger of isms" . . . "faith" . . . "courage" . . . "character." Her eyes drifted over the audience. There was Bob Clark. He looked nice in his new summer suit even if he was a little short. Well, Bob was sweet. He had been fun to go to dances with. She would never forget Bob.

(She saw herself returning home on a visit with her husband, a Wall Street broker—no, maybe a distinguished novelist. Well, anyway, he was tall, suave, faultlessly attired and rich. She was introducing him to all her friends, "And I want you to meet Bob Clark. He is one of my best and oldest friends." As the two men shook hands she looked at Bob affectionately. "What a pity he never married," she thought.)

• • • •

The diplomas had been given out and the preacher was intoning the benediction. The green oak leaves outside the window were etched against the gray-blue sky of late morning. Off through a cleft in the foliage, she caught a glimpse of a distant horizon. A feeling of excitement, adventure, swept over her. Then a sense of sadness. Too bad to leave all this . . . this simple humdrum quietude behind. But then, such was life.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

CARRYING the bride over the threshold is a good old American custom that presupposes the bride is slender. If this custom were observed every wedding anniversary, it might help to break down another tradition—the one that all housewives are plump!

It seems to follow that when the average girl settles down, she begins to take on weight. She adopts a new routine of living in which there is less time for tennis, swimming and gym classes. Even though she works harder than ever, modern housework is no aid to slimness. It does not exercise the large, figure-controlling muscles.

Household tasks use the same muscles over and over. There is plenty of work for the small muscles of the hands, feet, arms and legs, but these muscles are not the ones which hold the figure to lovely line. Nor do they use enough calories to help keep the weight down.

Tedious, But Not Hard.

As a matter of fact, the most intense use of the small muscles takes comparatively few calories. You would certainly consider ironing hard work. But even though you weigh 120 pounds and iron for an hour, you burn only 112 calories at this task. Mending socks is a tedious job, but it takes only 95 calories an hour. Light laundry uses 130 calories per hour; sweeping with a broom, 136 calories, and using a vacuum sweeper, 207 calories, and painting the furniture, 140 calories. Changing the furniture around comes under the head of active exercise—usually for the head of the house! He may use as many as 316 calories moving furniture for an hour.

Save time for tennis or gym. Housework won't slim you.

All these activities are classed as work, but they use too few calories and the wrong muscles to be called exercise. In 20 minutes' vigorous calisthenics you would expend as much energy as if you washed for a solid hour. And if you would get out and walk moderately fast you would use around 250 calories in an hour, or twice as many as at most household chores. No wonder the housewife is inclined to be plump!

Your good cooking is another factor to be reckoned with. Realizing that the way to a man's heart has not changed in a thousand years, the bride is determined to be a good cook. She wants her man to stop talking about the home cooking he used to enjoy and praise her hot biscuits. And it also follows that the best cooks seem to be a bit overweight.

Hmoe Chores Tiresome, but They Don't Use Up Enough Calories.

Keep Up Tennis.

Don't make the mistake of thinking housework is exercise. Keep up your tennis and badminton, for these activities help you to keep your slim figure. And don't fall into the habit of thinking that only the rich foods are good. Plan meals that do not contain too many high calorie dishes, and don't have rich desserts every night, or it will be your own fault if your husband sits around with his paper instead of taking you out dancing as he used to do.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Prince Louis Ferdinand, of Germany, and his bride, the former Grand Duchess Kira, of Russia, made their bow to a small section of Washington society yesterday afternoon at an al fresco party at the German Embassy. Greeting old friends, meeting new ones, and making themselves generally one of the most agreeable couples to visit the Capital in ever so long, they had everyone hoping before the party was over that they would change their plans and extend their visit here.

HOPE R. MILLER.

"We can't," said the Prince in his friendly manner. "Our plans are all made. We must be off soon for Detroit." His bride echoed this sentiment between handshakes, as the party moved merrily along, and guest after guest approached to be presented to her. A medium-sized person, with blonde-bobbed hair, deep blue eyes, and an engaging smile, she wore a simple figured frock—white pattern on a black background—and no jewels. The Prince, attired in a navy blue suit, might have passed for any other guest; and since there was no formal reception line, he frequently found himself talking to someone before he was introduced . . . and nobody seemed to mind, he least of all.

The spacious lawn behind the German Embassy was the scene of the party. There the Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff received in a most informal fashion, as cocktails and orange juice was passed, and guests clustered first around the Prince and his bride and then around the small tables laden with hors d'oeuvres and other cocktail dainties.

Frau Dieckhoff Assisted by Staff

Gowned in a trim spring print frock, Frau Dieckhoff was here, there and everywhere—doing her best to see that everyone had a chance to meet the guests of honor. The Ambassador and other members of the embassy staff likewise were doing their part at hosting as the party progressed.

Among early arrivals—although everyone seemed to arrive early—were the Minister Attache of the German Embassy, Herr Edgar Prochnik and Frau Prochnik, and the former's daughters, Mrs. Francis Spaulding, who is making a brief visit here. One of the most attractively attired women present. Frau Procrnik wore a trim navy blue chiffon frock, cut on tailored lines and set off with white organdy collar and cuffs. A small white petal-covered turban with a veil, and blue sandals completed her costume. Mrs. Spaulding, who came over from Europe on the Bremen, the same ship that brought the prince and his bride to this country, wore a blue and white frock with a wide-brimmed blue straw hat. She will be here several days longer before returning to her home in Stuttgart.

In the small company were several guests who knew the former Grand Duchess Kira when she spent several weeks in Washington in 1930 under the chaperonage of Princess Burhaneddin, who was then Mrs. Deming Jarves. Miss Laura Tuckerman and her sister, Miss Alice Tuckerman, were two of the first to arrive who were well acquainted with the grand duchess and who were warmly greeted with kisses from her. Miss Elsie Ekengren was another who knew the grand duchess during her previous Washington visit.

Prince Ferdinand Here On Seventh Visit

As for the prince—he has visited Washington seven times, and knows a number of persons here. in fact, it seems he knows scores of people in almost every city in this country and is looking forward to seeing hosts of friends wherever he goes. He finds persons from all circles of society interesting; likes most every one he meets ("provided he is not a snob," he said) and hopes to make many more visits to America.

Among guests who had a chance to talk with him were Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, in an all-black ensemble; Countess van der Straten-Ponthos; Mme. Van Haersma de With, in a navy and white outfit, and her daughter, Mlle. Nora Van Haersma de With; George T. Summerlin, of the State Department; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. J. M. Johnson; the newly arrived Brazilian Ambassador, Mario de Pimentel Brandao, who was accompanied by the new Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, Joaquim de Souza Leac; Miss Rebecca Wellington.

Also, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. John R. Williams, Baroness von Below, who met Prince Louis Ferdinand when he was here five years ago; Ralph Snowden Hill, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Miss Irene Boyle, Keith Officer of the British Embassy; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Miss Laura Harlan, Mrs. Knight Davie Pierrepont Moffat, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Coffin, and Anthony de Balasy of the Rumanian Legation.

Frau Thomsen in a gay rose and beige print frock, worn with a beige straw hat, introduced guest after guest to Prince Louis Ferdinand and his bride. She has known both of them for many years, and was hoping that they would stay here long enough so she could give a dinner in their honor. Herr Wilhelm Tannenberg, First Secretary of the Embassy, and Frau Tannenberg were also present, as were Herr Herbert Scholz and his attractive wife, who had chosen a beige frock with brown accessories for her costume. Herr Paulus von Stolzmann, Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, and Frau von Boetticher were other members of the German Embassy on hand for the party.

Prince Louis Ferdinand and his bride arrived in Washington Monday afternoon and were entertained at a small dinner at the Embassy Monday evening. Most of yesterday morning and the early part of the afternoon was spent in sight-seeing, all the way from Mount Vernon, to the White House, and on to the Capitol. The couple will leave today for Detroit.

About The Town

EVEN GUESTS of honor, as well as just plain guests, have taken to arriving an hour after cocktail parties were supposed to get under way. Yesterday, it was after six when Miss Margot Garrett and her fiance, Mariano Zuberbuhler, arrived at the afternoon party given in their honor by Miss Rebecca Trucco and Manuel Trucco, jr., daughter and son of the Chilean Ambassador.

DUDLEY HARMON

Miss Garrett's engagement ring is a blinding affair of two enormous diamonds set in platinum. Yesterday she wore a smart silk print, and a towering white hat, pushed well over one eye, with a wisp of blue veil.

SIGNS OF SUMMER at the party: Most of the men were in white linen suits. Everybody shied away from anything stronger than iced tea, for once.

Miss Alice Barry arrived hatless and breathless, having spent the entire morning playing tennis and the afternoon attending a Junior League meeting. She sails next Tuesday with a group of other young people to spend three months as an exchange student at the university in Florence, Italy. She will live with an Italian family and in between studies will take a two weeks' walking trip and do a little Alp climbing.

MR. AND MRS. Henry Gregor had a hard time getting the strawberries which they served at their tea yesterday afternoon.

"Our grocer told us that the British Embassy had about cornered the supply this week," explained Mr. Gregor. Strawberries and cream are a specialty of the embassy garden parties, of which there will be another tomorrow afternoon. However, the Gregors managed to obtain some, too.

Shortly, Mr. Gregor and the former Mrs. Hiram Bingham, now Mrs. Gregor, will be off to spend the summer at their country place in Salem, Conn.

Yesterday's party was held on the sunporch of the Wardman Park Hotel, overlooking the tennis courts. Misses Skirm Become Brides In Double Nuptials at St. Ann's Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Louis Skirm Are Married to S. Albert Mickler and Dr. Louis J. Faust.

St. Ann's Church yesterday morning was the scene of one of the most unusual weddings of the season—a double ceremony, at which Miss Dorothy Skirm became the bride of S. Albert Mickler, while her sister, Miss Bernice Skirm, was married to Dr. Louis J. Faust. The former Misses Skirm are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Louis Skirm of this city. Mr. Mickler is the son of the late Judge and Mrs. Albert H. Mickler, of St. Augustine, Fla. Dr. Faust is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Foust, of Carteret, N. J.

Each Bride Preceded By Own Attendants

Each was preceded to the altar by her own attendants. The Misses Frances Donohoe and Ellen Maloney, walking singly, were followed by Mrs. Julian A. Shearman, of Indianapolis, matron of honor for Miss Bernice Skirm, who was escorted by her young brother, George Louis Skirm, jr. The second bridal party included Miss Catherine Toomey and Mrs. William J. Rowan, jr., walking singly before Miss Colores Carroll, maid of honor for Miss Dorothy Skirm, who approached the altar on the arm of her father.

A rainbow effect was achieved by the delicate pastel shades of the bridesmaids' dresses, fashioned of chiffon with softly draped bodices and wide skirts. Matching wide-brimmed hats completed their ensembles. They carried spring flowers.

Judge Bertram Mickler, of St. Augustine, Fla., was best man for his brother, while Dr. Francis Egan, of Washington, was Dr. Faust's best man. The ushers included Mr. Mickler's other brother, T. Rogero Mickler, former Mayor of St. Augustine, and Aaron Anthony, Raymond Brown, Allen Blade, Norman Martin and William Monticone, all of this city.

Wedding Breakfast Follows Ceremony

After the ceremony there was a breakfast in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Skirm, the mother of the bride, in cornflower blue marquisette and wearing a corsage of tailsman roses, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Martin A. Faust, who was gowned in black and white printed chiffon and had a corsage of red roses, and also by Mrs. Thomas Philip Brown, Mr. Mickler's aunt, who wore a crepe dress of white and dubonnet and a corsage of white roses.

Later, Dr. and Mrs. Faust left for the Homestead at Hot Springs, Va. They will be at home after July 1 at Alban Towers. Dr. Faust is engaged in the practice of dentistry in Washington. He was graduated from Georgetown University. Mrs. Faust is a graduate of Immaculata Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. Mickler went South by boat and will spend some at Palm Beach. Upon their return around July 1 they will be at home at 4604 Forty-eighth street. Mr. Mickler is a graduate of Georgetown University law school, while Mrs. Mickler is a graduate of Trinity College.

Washington High School Class of 1888 Reunites

Mrs. Edward A. Paul, Widow of Founder and First Principal, Is Guest of Honor at Golden Jubilee Celebration.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Fifty years ago, President Grover Cleveland presented diplomas to 200 graduates of Washington High School at their commencement in Albaugh's Opera House. Last night, at the Washington Hotel, just across the street from where the theater then stood, more than 30 alumnae of the class of 1888 held a reunion in celebration of their golden jubilee.

Guest of honor was Mrs. Edward A. Paul, widow of Dr. Paul, founder of Washington High School and its first principal. Mrs. Paul, who was a mathematics teacher in the high school, attended the reception with one of her former students, Dr. Julia Green, whom she has been visiting since early in May.

The reunion was an informal party in the Rose room of the hotel and was arranged by Harry Wheaton Howard, Mrs. Adelia Doolittle Bauer and Mrs. Mabel Coleman Fishback, widow of Frederick L. Fishback, who was also a member of the class. The classmates of half a century ago came, bringing old class pictures and gathered around to identify the girls in their tight basque waists and full skirts and the boys in their suits of the elegant 80's era.

The greetings were, in many cases: "Now tell me your name," as white-haired classmates met each other. There was a cordiality such as is rarely found in a Washington gathering. Everyone was interested in everybody else. From questions as to the present, the group turned time back and recalled schools days with a youthful spirit which belied the lapse of years.

Miss Harriette M. Cushing, of the class of 1885, and Gideon A. Lyon, also of that class, were among guests. They were both teachers in the Washington High School—sub-assistant teachers—at the time the class of '88 was graduated. They were so young, Miss Cushing still wearing golden curls down her back, that the pupils considered them almost as members of the student body. Mrs. Lyon started the High School Review, Washington's first school paper, which is still published quarterly.

Another young teacher at that time was Miss Emma S. Jacobs, who also was a guest last night. Miss Jacobs was the pioneer teacher of cooking in Washington and the class of 1888 was her first. She started the home economics work in the schools of the Capital and, after teaching for a few years, became head of the department, a position in which she continued until her retirement in February of this year.

She remembered many of the girls in the class last night but only a few of the boys. She saw them, she said, only when they went past the door of her kitchen on their way to the manual training rooms, located in an old stable back of the school building.

The commencement of the class of '88 was saddened by the accident which had occurred three months before, resulting in the death of Dr. Paul, the young principal. He was run over by a horse while riding his bicycle. Mrs. Paul went from Washington to Wellesley College, where she taught until 1896 and then went to Kent Place School for Girls, Summit, N. J., where she remained until 1924, when she retired. She is still residing at Summit, but is spending a few weeks here this spring.

The class has many distinguished members. Among them are Dr. John Rothwell Slater, president of the University of Rochester; John E. Laskey, former U. S. attorney of the District, who was present last night; Mr. Howard, who for 38 years has been organist and choir director at the Church of the Immaculate Conception; Dr. Green, eminent woman physician; Frank Parker Stockbridge, writer and economist, now of Langhorn, Pa.; Josiah Turner Newcomb, an attorney in New York City; W. W. Everett, vice president of Woodward & Lothrop; Dr. William E. Aughinbaugh, who has spent 25 years in South America and has written on medical subjects; Miss Belle Allen, who taught in the District until she retired; Mrs. Bauer, widow of Dr. Louis A. Bauer, who was head of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism of the Carnegie Institution; Miss Myra Hendley, long an executive in the public school system here, and Miss Edith Meloy, who taught many years in Washington.

Letters from Dr. Slater and others who live at a distance and were unable to be present, were read by Mr. Howard.

There were several romances in the class, among them that of Mabel Coleman and Frederick L. Fishback, who later married, and that of Mary Brooks and Philip S. Gunion, who were married and both present last night.

Among others there were Luciana Chickering Beadell, who has returned to Washington from Arlington, N. J., where she was editor and publisher of a newspaper for some years after her husband's death; Blanche Campbell Brown, who was considered the beauty of the class; Mary G. Davenport, Bertha L. Gardner, Isabelle Gibson, Fannie Holmes, Grace Lyman Lietch, Margaret Merillat, Etta Johnson Miller, Lily Armour Newcomer, Mary Ossire, Nellie M. Shields, Caroline E. Toner, Mrs. James M. Watson, Isabelle C. Williams and Christie Davies.

Also Mr. Laskey, Mr. Everett, Melville D. Hensey, John Davies, Gilbert A. Clark, Arthur Poynton, William I. Boyd, Guy V. Collins, Reginald H. Higgins, George S. James and Harry L. Strang.

P.-T.A. Seminar Is Slated to Open In Capital July 5

Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, has announced a seminar of the Parent-Teacher movement, to be held at the National Education Association headquarters here July 5 to 9.

It is the first of its kind to be sponsored by the national congress and will draw members of college faculties from all parts of the country. The enrollment will be restricted to faculty members from teachers' colleges. The teachers will come here from New York, following the close of the N. E. A. convention there.

Mrs. Pettengill left for her home in Detroit Saturday after a brief stay in Washington, which was devoted to conferences on plans for the seminar program. It is designed to help teachers' colleges work out courses of their own on the Parent-Teacher movement. In the past the national congress has tried to supply staff members to conduct such courses in normal schools, but it has been impossible to meet the demand.

Mrs. Pettengill will return to Washington this week-end to complete preparations for the sessions here. She came to the Capital last week from California, where she addressed the convention of the California State Congress of Parents and Teachers, held immediately following the close of the national convention in Salt Lake City.

THE JOINT RESOLUTION authorizing the acceptance of the title to the property bequeathed to the Government by the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, has passed the house.

It has been proposed that the home of the late justice be preserved as a national shrine, perhaps maintained as a national poetry center. The resolution, however, only authorizes the Attorney General to accept the deed on behalf of the United States—action necessary in order to prevent the property being sold. Both Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Representative Kent E. Keller, of Illinois, spoke in favor of the resolution.

There has been much sentiment in the Capital for the preservation of the Holmes residence and petitions have been circulated for some weeks urging the passage of the resolution. Mrs. Charles Edward Russell and Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the D. C. Branch of the League of American Pen Women, were instrumental in arousing interest in it.

Takoma Women's Club Marks 25th Birthday

Both Founder and First President Honor Guests at Congressional Country Club Luncheon; Skit Depicts Events in Unit's History.

The Takoma Park Woman's Club, with both its founder and first president among the guests of honor, yesterday observed its twenty-fifth anniversary at a luncheon at the Congressional Country Club. Mrs. Walter P. Harman, the president, presided at the luncheon and Mrs. Paul W. Burk, first vice president, was in charge of the presentation of a skit, "The First Twenty-five Years Are the Hardest," which she had written.

Mrs. Clarence Beaman Smith, on whose front porch the first meeting of the charter members were held in 1913, and Mrs. Azro J. Cory, the first president, were seated at either side of Mrs. Harman at the head table. Their pictures were also included with hers in a souvenir program of the luncheon which contained a history of the club, prepared by Mrs. Frederick C. Lincoln.

The president's table extended the full length of the large dining room at the Congressional Country Club and opposite it was the small stage on which the skit was given. There was also a three-tiered birthday cake, with white candles which were lighted at close of the program by Mrs. Edmund Fraser.

Those taking part in the skit in addition to Mrs. Burk were Mrs. D. C. Gordon, the narrator; Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, Mrs. William Wallace, Mrs. J. Franklin Wisner, Mrs. George Davis and Mrs. George Cook.

Club History Told In Amusing Skit

The first scene showed the organization meeting of the club on Mrs. Smith's front porch with members dressed in costumes of the period. There followed scenes representing high points in the club's history: the passage of the mothers' pension bill at Annapolis, a measure which the members had supported and worked for; the woman suffrage movement, the organization of departments and amusing incidents entitled "The Trials of a President," "The Lingering Illness of Mrs. Ways and Means" and "The Hectic Club Woman."

The club originally was designed for the study and discussion of civic problems and was first known as the Takoma Park Civic Study Club. It began with 50 members and its prime interest was woman suffrage.

Mrs. Smith served as first vice president with Mrs. Cory as president. Other first officers were Mrs. H. C. Gore, second vice president; Mrs. J. A. LeClerc, recording secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. E. K. Nelson, corresponding secretary.

In its second year the club became affiliated with the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs and the District of Columbia Federation. Later it withdrew from the county federation and joined the general federation. Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, one of its past presidents, is retiring president of the District Federation.

In 1921, it instituted several sections for study of literature, art, current events, the Bible, music and dancing. Three years later, because of lack of interest in the sections, they were dropped temporarily. One by one others were formed in subsequent years; the art and music department in 1928, the literature department in 1929, the garden homemakers, drama and French departments in 1932 and the government study and philanthropic departments in 1934.

Club Active in Community Projects

The club has been responsible for enlisting interest of the town council and other organizations in the establishment of the Health and Welfare Center, with headquarters at the town hall. It also maintains a student loan fund available to girls who are high school graduates and have not means of continuing their education.

Past presidents, in addition to Mrs. Cory and Mrs. Biddle, who were honored at the luncheon were Mrs. R. A. Ramsey, Mrs. G. Albert Scott, Mrs. J. V. McNary, Mrs. Alexander Wetmore, Mrs. James A. Robertson, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, newly elected president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, also was a guest of honor.

Among others at the head table were Mrs. James A. Councilor, Mrs. Guy Goodman, Mrs. George E. Davis, Mrs. Wilbur Youngman, Mrs. Charles S. Howard, corresponding secretary; Mrs. LeBlone Burdette, Mrs. John Lucker, retiring president of the Junior Woman's Club of Takoma Park; Mrs. Edmond H. Graham, second vice president; Mrs. F. A. Shumaker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank J. Hopkins, treasurer; Mrs. W. L. Holt, Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall and Mrs. Frank E. Zundell, directors; Mrs. Gilbert Sward, literature department chairman; Mrs. F. A. Richmond, government study; Mrs. Frank A. Nickols, homemaker; Mrs. J. N. Quinn, garden; Mrs. E. J. Hurdle, press chairman; Mrs. S. Edward Widdifield, Mrs. Frederick Umhau and Mrs. Clarence S. Ross.

The choral group of the club contributed music to the program under direction of Mrs. Edmund L. Green and with Mrs. Waldo Schmidt as accompanist.

The anniversary committee was headed by Mrs. Burk and included Mrs. Harman, Mrs. Byron M. Coon, Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Clarence B. Smith, Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Youngman, Mrs. Widdifield, Mrs. G. Harris White, Mrs. Jesse Ramsdell, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. J. Warrington Hayes.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 7.—Elmer Johnson, slender city fireman whose wife was killed in a savage attack, was called to the witness stand at the inquest into her death today.

The men in the throng started from their chairs and cheered. Women shrieked. Nixon, his lip glistening with blood, leaped toward Johnson. But 20 policemen separated the combatants.

While Johnson was led from the chamber, Earl Hicks, another colored man, told the coroner's jury how he and Nixon crept through a window in the Johnson apartment. He testified he saw Nixon crush the skull of Mrs. Florence Johnson, mother of two children, with a brick.

The jury decided Nixon struck the fatal blow, but recommended both he and Hicks be held on murder charges.

Spending Primes Polls, Not Pump, Rep. White Holds

Representative Dudley A. White (Republican), of Ohio, said in a broadcast speech yesterday that with the new relief and works money President Roosevelt and his advisers "were not priming the business pump; they were pumping the primaries."

The so-called recovery billions, said White, "were not intended to revive business—they were intended to revive New Deal majorities and to punish any man who was not subservient to White House dictators . . .

"In 1933 there was no election. Between June and October of that year the number of persons on relief declined over 3,200,000. The year 1934 was an election year and that summer saw an increase in the number of persons on Federal relief of over 2,200,000. The year 1935 was another non-political year and during the summer relief rolls declined 3,000,000. Then came 1936, an important election year. That summer 1,200,000 men and women went back on the Government pay rolls. And last year, with no elections, we saw a decrease of 2,600,000 of those on relief . . .

"The so-called recovery program laid down before Congress on April 14 of this year was a milestone in American history . . . Because with the announcement of that pump-priming program politics came out into the open as a part of relief."

Council Life Extended.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt signed an order yesterday extending the National Emergency Council until June 30, 1939. The agency was established soon after the President took office to co-ordinate activities of various emergency organizations.

Manila, June 7 (AP).—Mayon Volcano, in a turbulent mood after a 10-year nap, spouted a plume of fire a mile and a half high tonight but scientists noted a definite diminution in violence.

Canada Petition Asks U. S. to Cede Sector in Maine

Ottawa, June 7 (Canadian Press). A petition urging the Canadian government to seek annexation of a small corner of the State of Maine was submitted to the House of Commons today by J. F. Pouliot, liberal member from Quebec.

The territory juts into the Province of Quebec and into the village of Estcourt. The petition declares the inhabitants of this district are completely separated from the rest of Maine by a forest, that they market their products in Canada and that the payment of customs duties on such products is burdensome and vexatious.

State Department officials said they had had no diplomatic communications on the proposal for the cession to Canada of a small strip of Maine territory.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Quite a few Congressmen and at least one Senator have been consulting Prince Mogul, the crystal gazer at the Shoreham, to find out whether they will be re-elected this year.

Maybe the seer has a direct line to Tommy Corcoran's office.

When an Ambassador entertained at dinner for the chief justice recently the sprightly wife of a fairly important official coddled her wine rather ardently. She all but tweaked the austere cheek of frosty Sir Herbert Marler, the Minister from Canada, who was sitting next to her and didn't know what to make of it.

Warren Magnuson. ...guides a star

Then, when Chief Justice Hughes, the ranking guest, began to make his adieus, as formally as the occasion demanded, she virtually patted him on the back affectionately and tried to dissuade him.

"Don't go!" she said coaxingly. "Don't go!"

Down the Potomac at Quantico the doughty Marines have been having serious trouble with their cats. Wives of officers ordered away have left some of their pets behind and some of the kitties have reverted to the wild state, attacking songbirds and even menacing members of the band, quite tigerishly.

• • • •

Intelligence of this deplorable situation eventually reached Quantico headquarters, and Col. Osterman (Quantico's Chief of Staff) has issued an order:

Every cat must be belled, or the leathernecks, who are well armed, will deal with 'em summarily.

By this time the Marines must have the situation well in hand.

When President Roosevelt announced at yesterday's press conference that American aviators who fight on the revolutionists' side in other countries might lose their flying licenses, one perverse chap in the room almost asked him whether he meant outsiders in revolutions, like LaFayette or von Steuben or Kosciusko in our revolution (1776) against England.

It drives Washington hostesses frantic when the Senate talks itself into night sessions, because the weary Senators phone at the last minute and beg off dinner parties for which they have accepted invitations many days in advance. The Washington hostesses are forced to phone some one with a starched shirt to come and eat for the Senator.

• • • •

Thus I found myself (a tremulous country bumpkin) yanked from my typewriter the other evening to fill in for the affluent and aristocratic Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, by a hostess to whom I am undeniably obligated . . . Handsome Mrs. Gerry confided that usually when the Senator is thus detained at the Capitol she sends him some supper by the chauffeur, because she's afraid he might be led astray by the fleshpots of the Senate restaurants and eat the wrong thing.

Quite incognito, one of Hollywood's bright young movie stars tiptoed into the Capitol recently to do a little sight-seeing with personable Warren Magnuson, the blond Congressman from Seattle, who was once a football star . . . Or so one of my undercover men on the Hill tells me, on my promise not to mention the lady's name. Her secret is safe with me, of course.

• • • •

It's a legend among postal employes in Washington that a Congressman once tried to frank a piano free through the mails . . . And it's no legend that several franked their winter suits and underwear home.

64 Ordained As Priests in Ritual Here

Nearly 4,000 persons, including church dignitaries from almost every State in the Union, yesterday witnessed ceremonies ordaining 64 candidates for the priesthood conducted in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

The candidates, representing nearly every order of the Catholic Church, and the largest in the world to receive holy orders outside of Rome, was ordanied by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore.

Mother Carried In.

As early as 7:15 a. m. relatives and friends of the candidates began arriving at the Shrine. One of the witnesses was a crippled mother whose son was to be ordained. Friends carried her into the church.

Bishop McNamara was assisted in celebrating the ordination mass by the Rev. Walter J. McCarthy, S. S., and the Rev. Edward A. Connolly, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary. The Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., was the master of ceremonies. The Sulpician Seminary Choir sang.

The new clergymen will be given their assignments after they return to home parishes to celebrate their first solemn high masses. Home or foreign missions, assignments to various parishes in the country or further studies at Catholic University await them.

Two of the priests ordained yesterday will specialize in work among Negroes here and abroad.

Prelates Attending.

Distinguished prelates attending the service included the Very Rev. William A. Murphy, S. S. J.; the Very Rev. Donald Shearer, O. M. Cap., faculty member of Capuchin College; the Very Rev. John Schlinkman, S. D. S.; the Very Rev. Vincent Chicca, O. S. S. T.; the Very Rev. Anthony Vieban, S. S.; the Very Rev. Michael Shugrue, S. A.; the Very Rev. Paul Francis, S. Pugilist Teaches Judge Here How To 'Ride' Punch

Police Court Judge John P. McMahon received a free lesson in boxing yesterday.

His instructor was Nanous Scott, 18, colored, who was in court on a charge of street fighting. Nanous protested he was not fighting his unnamed sparring partner, but was teaching him the art of "riding with a punch so you can hit the other man twice."

"I wouldn't really hit that boy, judge," he protested. "Why, that boy's the head boy of Q street."

Before suspending sentence in the case, Judge McMahon requested Nanous to give a demonstration of his technique. Presumably the judge now can ride a punch as well as Nanous and the "head boy of Q street."

Wanted by D. C. Police, Pastor Is Found Slain

With his heart pierced by the bullet from a .22 caliber rifle from which new wrapping paper had not yet been taken off, the Rev. James E. Worthington, 45, colored, was found dead in the driveway of the home of Mary Proctor, colored, at Chapel Hill, Md., yesterday.

In his pocket was a note to "Dear Sis Scott" saying he had no idea things would "end this way." He had been wanted by Washington police for allegedly shooting at a Washington colored woman recently.

Old World Is Re-created Here at Folk Dance Festival

Garfield park last night became a little corner of the old world where a prince and princess walked hand in hand under the trees, and smiled regally at dancing girls of eight nations.

The prince and princess said they were the only ones at the celebration, the second Folk Dance Festival sponsored this year by the District playgrounds. The prince was Juanita Carter, 16, of 708 seventh street southeast, who admitted she owed her title of the evening to a pageboy bob, and the princess, Betty Bruffey, 14, of 820 K street southeast.

But the prince was tall, and the princess lovely, and the festival was for them, for the grand ladies and for nearly 500 persons who watched the dancers from the shadows behind the Japanese lanterns.

During a few minutes the scene shifted from Europe to America, as girls from Rosedale Playground performed an old-fashioned square dance. Their performance, and the songs they danced to, "Mademoiselle of Armentiers" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," brought the heaviest applause of the evening.

The rest of the time the girls danced down the streets of half a dozen countries. There were English dancers from Garfield Playground, Dutch girls from Virginia Avenue, girls from Kenilworth who hopped, skipped and shook fingers in a Swedish Klappdans.

Spanish dancers from Hoover Playground performed a "Jota," Germans from Thomson Playground danced to the music of "Alle Schwarzen Bruder," and Italian girls brought castanets from Hayes Playground to perform the "Tarantella."

Final event was a Polish gypsy dance around a kettle, presented by Hayes Playground, with songs by Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, of Alexandria, Playground director, and Erma Dean, 16, of 143 E street southeast.

According to Park Policeman S. N. McCune, the festival was the biggest Garfield Park has seen. He reported no trouble except from a mysterious intruder, armed with a bean shooter, who scored several direct hits, but no injuries. Officer McCune could not find the sharpshooter.

The dancing girls included:

Trucker Held, 2 Sought in Traffic Crashes

2 Women Collide With Police Car; Hit-Run Drivers Hunted.

A truck driver was charged with reckless driving last night in the traffic injury of a 65-year-old resident of Georgetown, while police conducted a search for two hit-run motorists.

Victim of one of the hit-run drivers, Calvert Ross, 23, who lives at Riggs and Chillum roads in nearby Maryland, was released from Casualty Hospital after treatment for minor injuries, though the door handle of the car was sheared off in hitting him. The accident occurred in the 400 block of Riggs road.

Mrs. Agnes M. Gordon, 36, of 119 Elmo street, Bethesda, Md., suffered a broken right shoulder and severe cuts and bruises late yesterday when the auto in which she was riding with her husband, was struck by a "hit and run" motorist.

Police later arrested a man identifying himself as Fred A. Crawford, of the 700 block of F street northwest. He was charged with driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of a collision. Mrs. Gordon was taken to Providence Hospital.

Two women were injured in a collision with a scout car driven by Police Sergt. William H. Bailey at Fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. Mrs. Elizabeth Ironsides, 1253 Newton street northeast, was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for treatment for shock. Mrs. Pearl Seis, 25, of 507 Rhode Island avenue northeast, suffered head lacerations.

Herbert C. Breakey, 42, of North Arlington, Va., was released in $1,000 bond on a charge of reckless driving after his truck is alleged to have struck William Henry Gough, 65, of 3285 M street northwest. Gough suffered fractures of the skull and leg. The accident occurred in the 3500 block of M street.

Aleck Bohrer, 26, suffered a possible fracture of the skull when hit by a motorcycle in the 800 block of E street northwest. He was removed to Emergency Hospital.

Two colored men were arrested after one of them, according to police, fired at a truck driver following a collision at Fourth and W streets northwest. The accident brought no casualties, though the bullet narrowly missed hitting the trucker, David Schlesky, 503 Quackenbos street northwest.

D.C. Man Faces Pa. Death Trial Today

Philadelphia, June 7 (AP).—Edward Haislip, of Washington, who recently signed a statement that he was the slayer of Charles Roche, although Roche's wife—Haislip's sister—was convicted, pleaded innocent today to voluntary and involuntary manslaughter. His trial is to start tomorrow.

Roche was stabbed last November and his wife, Mrs. Mary Roche, 32, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter. Haislip surrendered after he had sent to court a statement that he killed his brother-in-law protecting his sister.

Haislip, 31-year-old Washington mechanic, had asserted that it was to shield him that his sister confessed to killing Roche. He said he had withheld his own confession because she had threatened suicide if he talked.

Hohenzollern Honeymooners Visit Capitol and White House

Prince Louis Ferdinand of Hohenzolern, grandson of the former kaiser and one-time employe of Henry Ford, watched the workings of democratic government yesterday as he and his bride, Princess Kyra of Russia, paid a brief visit to Washington.

After a trip to the Capitol, the 30-year-old prince observed that although he had been to Washington "seven or eight times" before, he had never seen Congress in session. Earlier in the day, he inspected several Government departments while his pretty 29-year-old wife visited Mount Vernon.

The royal couple called on the President and were shown over the Executive Mansion by James Roosevelt. "The President has been so nice to us," beamed the prince yesterday. Three days after their arrival in America on May 26, he and Princess Kyra were guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park.

The tall young prince and his wife leave for Detroit today to visit Henry Ford, in whose automobile factories Louis Ferdinand was employed in 1933. The prince, second son of the former crown prince, is now an executive in the foreign department of Lufthansa, German air line. "My experience in the Ford plant has been very useful in my work in aviation," he declared yesterday.

He said that he and his wife, who is the daughter of Grand Duke Cyril, pretender to the nonexistant Russian throne, are making a six-month honeymoon trip around the world.

Citizens Group Backs Maddox For D. C. Head

Luther R. Maddox, 53, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, last night received indorsement of nearly 200 association members to succeed George E. Allen as Commissioner of the District.

A resolution of indorsement, introduced by A. B. Cardy, chairman of the taxation committee, was passed unanimously by the members present at the forty-fourth anniversary meeting of the group, held at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, Thirteenth and Fairmont streets northwest.

The resolution pointed out that Maddox's name had been before President Roosevelt for more than a year as candidate for the office of District people's counsel. It added Maddox had experience in both the engineering and legal professions, and had served two years in the World War.

Maddox, who lives at 1401 Columbia road northwest, has law offices in the Woodward Building. Copies of the indorsement were ordered sent to President Roosevelt, and the Senate and House District Committees.

The association was given an American flag, gift of the flag committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The presentation was made by Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent of the D. A. R. for the District.

Thirty-one new members were admitted to the association.

Public's Conferees to Propose Beauty Parlor Pay Today

A basic wage for 4,500 women employes in the District beauty culture industry will be recommended this morning to the wage conference, it was disclosed yesterday by the public representatives.

Employers have asked a minimum of $17 per week, but employes have argued for no less than $22.30.

Members of the conference are Dr. Philips Marshall Brown, chairman; Mrs. William A. Slade, Mrs. Richard W. Hogue, who represent the general public; Mrs. Julia F. Crandall, Herban Roza and Kenneth Bennett, employer representatives, and Miss Ethel M. Beede, Mrs. Betty Anderson and Miss Adell Burke, employe representatives.

U. S. Adds 9,849 To April Pay Roll, 998 More in D. C.

The Federal Government added 8,849 employes to its pay roll during April, 998 of them in the District, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday.

The number of Federal workers during the month was 826,319, with a pay roll of $123,834,171, as compared to $123,961,041 for the previous month, the commission said.

The decrease in the April pay roll in the face of increased employment was explained by the employment of many workers on a per diem basis, coupled with the fact that April is shorter by one day than March.

Of the total employed, 69,344 were "force account" employes—workers engaged on construction projects—761,830 were full-time employes and 34,145 were engaged on a part-time basis.

Bureau Will Get Permanent 'Home'

The Health Department permit bureau will be located in the old Police Court Building after July 1, it was announced yesterday.

Long a problem in regard to a permanent location, the bureau will move into the basement floor of the building after remodeling is completed.

The bureau now is located at Eighth and I streets northwest, where for more than a year it has enjoyed free rent. The rent was paid with social security funds, an action which was soon declared illegal by the General Accounting Office.

Methodists Act to Unite 2 Churches

Women's Guilds Meet Tonight to Launch Co-ordination.

Ratification of the union between McKendree and Langdon churches of this city by both the Baltimore Methodist Episcopal annual conference and the joint quarterly conference was announced yesterday by the Rev. Samuel E. Rose, upon his return from the meeting at Hagerstown.

The Rev. Mr. Rose, McKendree pastor, was appointed by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes to head the united church, which will be known as the McKendree M. E. Church.

Bennett Heads Trustees.

At the joint quarterly conference, which convened immediately after the annual meeting and which was called for the purpose of considering the proposed merger, W. M. Bennett was appointed to head the new board of trustees and the Rev. Mr. Rose was elected to head the official board. Other committees also were elected at the quarterly meeting, which many delegates from each congregation attended.

Following approval of the merger, organizations within the congregations are working to co-ordinate activities of various groups. The two women's guilds will convene tonight in joint session and Sunday school classes, young people's units and other branches will meet later to consider unification of their programs.

Building Bids Weighed.

Bids are being considered for a new building which will be erected on the triangle at South Dakota avenue and Twenty-fourth street at Rhode Island avenue northeast. The new church is to be of stone, Gothic in design. Architects are Wenner and Fink, of Philadelphia.

Pending construction of the edifice to house the combined groups, the McKendree congregation has been worshiping in the Pythian Temple on Sunday mornings and joining with Langdon members at night in the Masonic Hall, Rhode Island and Mills avenues northeast.

The McKendree Church, which boasts a 97-year history, held its last service in its former home on Massachusetts avenue, between Ninth and Tenth streets, on April 3. The Langdon Church is located at 2228 Evarts street northeast.

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We were just thinking, probably at the risk of exploding an ear-drum, that the home-town boxing writers are being very harsh to young George Abrams, who seems to be guilty only of licking the fellow who not so long ago was the middleweight champion of the world.

POVICH.

When he beat Terry Yarosz the other night Abrams licked a man who is still ranked among the top middleweights and who, as we were saying, was the champ. That was in 1935, and Yarosz at this writing is only 28. We would not call him an old man of the prize ring. Barney Ross held the welterweight title at 29, and Max Schmeling, at 32, knocked out Joe Louis.

So this is the fellow that Abrams beat. And in other communities, if a local lad licked a not-so-recent world champ, there would be widespread exulting. If it happened in New York, particularly by a 19-year-old lad who has had only 21 fights, the Manhattan press would write that down as something worth while.

Writers Suspicious.

But what do we have in Washington? A coterie of boxing writers who sniff suspiciously, scribble that the fight proved nothing, look down their noses at Abrams, and hint that Yarosz took a dive for the local boy. Abrams is entitled to ask what a kid has to do to get a fair shake and fair consideration.

The insinuations that Yarosz took a dry splash for Abrams are downright ludicrous. They can be answered with one word: "Why?" What on earth could possibly make it worth while for Yarosz to go into the tank for Abrams? There isn't enough money among the local lad's handlers to finance an adequate training period, much less finance some business on the part of Yarosz.

And to read the write-ups, you'd think that Yarosz and Abrams were fighting to a $20,000 gate out there at Griffith Stadium instead of to receipts that barely totaled $3,000. There wasn't enough money in Abrams' end of the purse to interest a palooka to dive for the local boy, much less Yarosz.

And Yarosz certainly wouldn't dive to make a killing on the 3-to-1 odds that prevailed at ringside. The betting on Washington fights is promiscuous, it's loud and it's noisy, but it's cheap, chicken-feed stuff. Anybody, who waved a double saw buck under the noses of Washington's fight-betting fraternity would probably make a 3-to-1 shot the odds-on favorite. That may be exaggerating it a bit, not much, believe us. We've seen those two-bit betters in action.

GEORGE GETS A KISS!
"Nice Work!" Says Mama Abrams.

And why on earth would Yarosz dive for Abrams anyway? It certainly wouldn't do Yarosz any good. He's not so far washed up that he still can't cash in on his reputation as a one-time world's champ. There are bouts in the offing for Yarosz that mean real money to the fellow and which this beating by Abrams may have killed off.

Statements Amusing.

It's amusing, too, to see Ray Arcel quoted anent the Abrams-Yarosz battle. Arcel is Yarosz's trainer, and he gave out a statement to the effect that "if I didn't know Yarosz the way I do, I'd think he took a dive for Abrams. I never saw him put up such a poor fight."

Sure, Arcel wouldn't like to have it suspected that the Abrams fight was one of Yarosz's routine battles. He still hopes to make some money with Yarosz and would prefer to have the bout described as an off-night for the former champ.

Perhaps Abrams didn't beat much when he beat Yarosz. But he licked him, which was what he set out to do. And he beat him decisively, despite the fact it was no unanimous decision. "Maybe I booted one," said Referee Eddie LaFond after it was announced that his vote had been cast for Yarosz. Whaddaya mean "maybe," Eddie?

Abrams may never achieve any national fame as a fighter. We don't think he'll even get near the top. But in that we might be mistaken, too. But the point we make is howinell can the kid's efforts be decried. He's 19, has had only 21 fights, has lost only 1, outpointed the one man who knocked him out and beat one of the ranking middleweights of the world who had held the title only three years ago.

Let's a look at the record, as Al Smith has a habit of saying. In his first 20 fights, who did Yarosz ever lick? Nobody of any account. In fact, not until his thirty-fifth fight did he beat a "name" fighter.

Mrs. Pray, Mrs. Stern Are Beaten

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern, host club star and Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, bowed out of the District women's championship at Indian Spring yesterday in mild upsets, as Helen Dettweiler and other favorites advanced to the second round with little difficulty.

Finishing with birdies on the thirteenth and fourteenth holes, Miss Dettweiler, medalist and defending champion, routed Ellen Kincaid by a 6-and-4 margin, needing par in for a 76 at the finish of the match.

Marion Brown, whose 81 was second low on Monday, dropped Mrs. Jack Scott into the consolation by a 5-and-4 margin, while Mrs. Walter Stokes defeated Mrs. T. J. Johnson by a 3-and-2 margin, and had par in for all 81 despite five three-putt greens.

Mrs. K. S. Giles, left-handed star of the Four Corners Club, won by an impressive 5-and-4 margin over Mrs. Pray, while in other matches Mrs. Bishop Hill defeated Mrs. Harvey Brundage, of Columbia; Mrs. Betty Meckley won over Louise Claytor, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. George Hussey won a last-hole battle over Mrs. Myron Davy.

Mrs. Stern lost to Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, Woodmont, in the biggest form reversal of the day's play. The winner was 1 up at the turn after holding a two-hole lead on the first nine, increased her lead to 2 up on the seventeenth tee and closed the match on the final green after losing the seventeenth hole. The Woodmont golfer had an 86 for the round.

Miss Dettweiler strengthened her favorite's role with the 6 and 4 victory over Miss Kincaid, who was figured to give her a close match. Out in 39, the medalist was 4 up and after holding the margin through the twelfth hole she won in impressive fashion with the birdies.

Miss Brown, back on the game that carried her to several triumphs last year, was 2 up after a 41 on the first nine and finally ended the match with a birdie deuce on the fourteenth hole.

Mrs. Stokes, now in the dark horse role, would have been in the low seventys but for the inconsistent putting. Mrs. Johnson won the first two holes with pars but the winner rallied and closed the match on the sixteenth by a 3 and 2 margin.

Mrs. Meckley, two-time winner of the tourney and finalist last year, led by three holes at the turn against Mrs. Claytor and ended the match on 17.

Mrs. Hill led Mrs. Brundage by two holes at the turn and won 14 and 13, to end the match by a 4 and 3 margin. The only eighteenth-hole match of the day found Mrs. Hussey halving the hole with Mrs. Davy to preserve a one-hole lead. The match was close all the way, being even at the turn.

Today's quarter-final matches find the Marion Brown vs. Mrs. Meckley rivalry being renewed to top the card, while Mrs. Hussey will attempt to stop the victorious march of Helen Dettweiler. Mrs. Goldsmith and Mrs. Giles face in the other encounter, while Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Hill is the fourth match on the card.

Drive Red to Showers in 7th; Lee Goes Route for Victors.

New York, June 7.—Charley Ruffing's seven-game winning streak was halted abruptly today as the Chicago White Sox belted the big Yankee right-hander out of the box to win the opener of a four-game series, 8 to 5.

Thornton Lee went the route for Chicago to gain his second victory. He gave up nine hits and helped his own cause with a home run and a single that drove in a run.

The Sox scored four runs on five hits in the second and added two more in the fifth and another in the sixth. Ruffing was yanked after Lee clouted his four-bagger in the seventh.

The score at the time was 2-2. Jimmy Foxx, belting first baseman, had hit his fifteenth homer of the season with one on.

Joe Cronin, Sox manager, protested about Allen's shirt to Umpire Bill McGowan, who ordered Allen to change or fix his shirt.

Allen left the field, followed by Manager Oscar Vitt, who wanted the pitcher to remain in the game.

Allen said, "I've been pitching all season with this shirt on and if I can't pitch with it on, I won't pitch."

Zuber replaced Allen.

Lewis, Gainer Sign For Title Fight

New York, June 7 (AP).—Gus Greenlee, manager of John Henry Lewis, announced today the light-heavyweight champion had signed to defend his title against Al Gainer in Pittsburgh the middle of August.

The winner, Greenlee said, will travel to Germany to defend the crown against Adolph Heuser in Berlin between the tenth and fifteenth of September.

The announcement was Greenlee's answer to the New York State Athletic Commission, which earlier in the day gave the champion 15 days to agree to a title bout with Tiger Jack Fox, of Spokane, Wash.

Ken Keltner Given New '38 Contract

Boston, June 7 (AP).—Ken Keltner, flashy Cleveland rookie third baseman, has signed a new 1938 contract calling for a substantial salary increase, C. C. Slapnicka, Indians' vice president, said today.

It was believed Keltner would receive about $8,500 this season, his first in the major after coming up from Milwaukee. He also signed for 1939.

"Keltner has proved himself a real big leaguer and is entitled to a big league salary," said Slapnicka.

14 Withdrawals Are Reported In Open; 170 Expected to Play

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor

Denver, June 7.—Under a low-hanging canopy of storm clouds that obscured the picturesque back drop of the Rocky Mountains, and drenched the treacherous terrain of Cherry Hills, the line-up for the forty-second National Open golf championship underwent a shake-up today while fresh arguments developed over the hazards that seem calculated to discourage chances of another record-smashing tournament.

A total of 14 withdrawals was disclosed by Joseph Dey, executive secretary of the United States Golf Association. The list, in addition to Eddie Held, Denver amateur, who also was disqualified for an infraction of the rules during the district qualifying tests, included such well known professionals as Al Espinosa, one time runner-up for the Open crown, and Orville White, of Greensboro, N. C.

So far, Dey said, 11 replacements have been named, with the probability that other substitutes will be found to produce a maximum starting field of 170 players for the first round Thursday.

The raw and rainy weather curtailed practice, besides discouraging most of those who toured the Cherry Hills layout from reporting their scores, but gave impetus, in the more comfortable and congenial atmosphere of the locker room, to debate over

(A) The additions to the course's natural hazard and

(B) The possibility anyone threatening Tony Manero's record 281, equivalent to three under par for the 72 holes, will be a cinch to win.

Somebody might get hot enough to beat that figure," commented Billy Burke, hero of the marathon playoff with George Von Elm for the 1931 open championship, "but it's highly unlikely.

"The course is not an unfair test, as I see it, but it's tricky enough to catch up with most of us. As I see it, the payoff will be on accuracy, rather than length, off the tees. The 'trolley-wire' hitters will not have much worrying to do."

Champion Ralph Guldahl, who shares the co-favorite's role with Slammin' Sammy Snead, West Virginian and runner-up as championship freshman last year, echoed Burke's sentiments. Observers noted that the titleholder has been putting the accuracy idea into practice by using either

Johnson's Bid for Home Run Fails With 2 On.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 7.—Bob Johnson's bid for his eleventh home run of the season fell a yard short today, so the Detroit Tigers made off with a 5-4 victory over the Athletics in the opener of a three-game series.

The tying and winning runs were on base and two were out in the ninth when Johnson hoisted one of Roxie Lawson's pitches toward the leftfield pavilion. Chet Laabs backed against the wall, reached high and brought it down for the last putout.

Aided by an error by rookie Sam Chapman, the Tigers scored twice against George Caster in the third inning and twice in the fourth, one of the latter runs coming on Rudy York's eleventh homer of the year.

The Athletics, held to one run by George Gill for the first six innings, drove him from the hill with a two-run attack in the seventh.

2-Run Rally in 9th Aids Tribe In 7-to-5 Victory Over Bosox

Johnny Allen Starts for Indians and Tosses Away Two-Run Lead; Is Banished.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 7.—The top-place Cleveland Indians gained their first victory of the season at Fenway Park today by blasting out a two-run rally in the ninth to down the Red Sox, 7-5. Lyn Lary's third single of the day, "Bad News" Hale's double and Earl Averill's triple were the decisive blows.

Righthander Johnny Allen opened for the Indians and he tossed away a 2-0 lead in the first when, with two out, he passed Ben Chapman and then fed Jimmy Foxx with a pitch that the slugging first baseman converted into his fifteenth homer of the year.

When Allen retired the Sockers by fanning Manager Joe Cronin, the latter complained to Umpire-in-chief McGowan that the pitcher's tattered right sleeve gave him unfair advantage over the batter. The official agreed and Allen was sent to his clubhouse to change his shirt.

After a five-minute delay Manager Ossie Vitt went in to investigate Allen's tardiness. When the latter refused to obey McGowan's order, Vitt fined him $250 and replaced him with Bill Zuber, who gave the Sockers three more runs before he was relieved by Johnny Humphries with one out in the third. Humphries held the home team hitless during the remaining six and two-thirds innings and Gene Desautels, who drew a pass in the seventh, was the only one to reach first base against him.

Cubs Defeat Giants, 4-2

Battle of Homers Helps Chicago Widen Lead.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 7.—The Chicago Cubs beat the New York Giants, 4 to 2, today in a battle of home runs to increase their National League lead to a game and a half over the New Yorkers. Billy Herman and Joe Marty hit four-baggers for the Cubs, while Mell Ott and Jimmy Ripple accounted for both Giant tallies with homers.

Bill Lee let the Giants down with seven hits in winning his sixth straight and seventh of the year, although he had his streak of 35 consecutive scoreless innings broken in the fourth, when Ott hit his four-bagger.

Griffs Stage 5-Run Rally; Errors Hurt

Buddy Lewis Charged With 3 Misplays; Clift Sparks St. Louis.

By Shirley Povich.

The Nats showed great perseverance yesterday and succeeded, finally, in taking an 11-8 licking from the St. Louis Browns who, mind you, are the eighth-place ball club in the American League.

It was a lesson in persistency by the Nats who set about losing the ball game in the first inning and, except for one lapse, never relaxed their inept efforts. An assortment of pathetic pitching, four large errors that found their way into the box score (and several that didn't), were powerful aids to the Nats in their defeat.

As late as the seventh inning there was great danger that the Nats might win the ball game and the 4,000 customers in the stands managed a weak cheer, but in the eighth inning the Washington athletes regained their stride of the day and presented the Browns with the three winning runs.

Lewis Has Worst Day.

It was a history-making day for Buddy Lewis. The young third baseman spent the worst afternoon of his big league career, tossing three errors into the proceedings and helping the Browns to four of their runs.

But not until Monte Weaver was sent in to pitch in the eighth inning did the Nats actually clinch their defeat. Back in the seventh they had lapsed to the extent of making five runs off Rookie Howard Mills, driving him from the box and tying the score at 8-8. Then, because a pinch hitter had been used for Harry Kelley, Manager Bucky Harris sent Weaver to the mound.

Weaver disposed of Pitcher Bonetti, the first man to face him, on a grounder to Travis, but he was not guilty of any more good pitching. He pitched a line-drive double to Buster Mills, that fellow's second two-bagger of the day, and then he pitched a leftfield single to Harland Clift, which was Clift's fourth hit of the afternoon.

Clift's ball tore it's way through Cecil Travis' hands and skipped out to leftfield where Johnny Stone completed the massacre of it. Stone permitted the ball to roll through his legs to the leftfield wall and Clift dashed all the way to third on the two-base error.

As if one run wouldn't assure the Browns of the ball game, Weaver wild-pitched Clift across the plate from third with the second run. It was a unique wild pitch inasmuch as it also was the fourth ball to Kress, who walked. Whereat Weaver also walked—to the dug-out.

In Chief Hogsett, Harris picked just the man who could complete the damage. Hogsett pitched a single to Bell and a long fly to Sammy West and the Browns had their third run of the inning.

Leonard Allows 4 Runs.

With that 3-run deficit staring them in the fact in the last two innings, the Nats did absolutely nothing about it, beyond Cecil Travis' futile single with one out in the ninth. Julio Bonetti saw to that.

Back in the first inning, Dutch Leonard had thrown three runs to the Browns. Four straight hits—by Clift, Kress, Bell and West—produced the tallies. And in the second inning, to their probable dismay, the Browns knocked Leonard from the box with another run produced by Clift's two-bagger.

Young Mills, the rookie southpaw who had beaten the Nats in St. Louis, gave 'em a run in the first inning after Bluege walked and stole second. Bonura drove it home with a single to center. But then he pitched three scoreless innings.

Wildness plagued him in the fifth and three straight walks that followed Lewis' safe bunt produced a run for Washington and Travis drove in a second run with a long fly. That put the Nats back in the ball game and cut the Browns' lead to 4-3, but Buddy Lewis had not yet been heard from.

More Errors in Sixth.

In the Browns' sixth, Lewis put Harry Kelley, who had been pitching good ball, knee deep in trouble. He made a wild throw on Heath's grounder and a bit later on the next play fumbled Heffner's smash. A walk to Buster Mills filled the bases and Clift's two-bagger to left emptied 'em. That made it 7-3 in favor of the Browns, but in the next inning Lewis made it 8-3 by muffing Bell's grounder.

Then, without warning, the Nats tied the score with a five-run uprising. Lewis and Bonura started it with hits and McQuinn helped by muffing Stone's grounder. Travis drove over the second run of the inning with a single and Case drove in runs Nos. 3 and 4 with a double to center. He reached third somehow and from that point Bonetti wild-pitched him home with the tying run.

Thus it looked pretty dark for the Nats after all their early attempts to lose the ball game, but they regained their stride in the eighth, as we were saying, and clinched their defeat.

Baseball Championship Added to Basketball, Football Laurels.

Eastern High School's baseball team won its second interhigh title series by downing a hard-fighting Tech nine, 7-5, in an exciting and well-played battle at Eastern stadium yesterday.

As the Lincoln Parkers had previously won the football and basketball championships, the athletes performing for Chief Guyon yesterday seemed to realize the importance of the tussle, and went right to work to give the Easterners one of their best athletic years.

But the charges of Bruce Kessler kept on the heels of the winners. Time and time again the Tech boys were in a position to tie up the tilt or even go ahead, but the necessary punch was lacking as 11 men were left stranded on the bases.

Tech opened the game with a tally pushed across by Chester Ciomei's double after J. Ciomei had walked. But Eastern came right back to score two runs on successive singles by Paul Kober and Walter Stockwell, after Les Cooksey had drawn a free ticket from Francis Wiles.

Dick Wine tied up the game with a sharp single through the infield that sent Warren Field scampering over the plate. The game was really won when the Lincoln Parkers, behind the hitting of Stockwell, Lee Lusby, Norman Treadway and Chester Tawney, shoved over four runs in the third inning.

Lou Mostow, crack Tech leftfielder, tried his best to bring the score to a respectful figure by slamming out a home run with two of his chums aboard in the seventh, to make it 6-5 in favor of the Easterners. But at this point, Tech's offensive bogged down. Their scoring for the day was over.

The slugging of Jacobs, Stockwell and Treadway was outstanding for the Lincoln Parkers, while Chester Ciomei, who by the way, played a nice game throughout, collected three hits in five times at bat to star for Kessler's hard-hitting Tech aggregation. Lou Mostow, Don Treganowan and Dick Wines, by getting a brace of hits apiece, shared honors with Chester in the hitting department.

Riders Keep 2d Place by 20 to 6 Victory as Redinger Stars.

Slamming three Wilson pitchers for a total of 18 hits, Roosevelt High's baseball team maintained its hold on second place in the Inter-High standings by defeating the Presidents, 20-6, yesterday at Roosevelt Stadium. While his teammates went on a hitting spree, Jack Redinger, ace Roosevelt hurler, set the Wilson team down with nine scattered hits.

By virtue of his victory yesterday, Redinger laid claim to an impressive record, having won his last five starts on the mound for the Riders. After dropping a 15-0 decision to Eastern in the series opener, Redinger pitched Roosevelt to victory over Central, Tech, Western, Anacostia and Wilson. This record tops all Inter-High pitchers in the matter of games won.

Wilson assumed a 1-0 lead in the first inning, and held a 5-3 advantage going into the last half of the third inning. But it was in this inning that the Riders scored four runs and assumed a lead they never relinquished. Roosevelt continued its onslaught in the next inning by scoring eight times and driving Herman Byer, the Presidents' starting pitcher, from the mound.

Bill Bush relieved Byer and pitched a satisfactory game until the seventh frame, when he was shelled from the box and was replaced by Dick Offutt. Meanwhile, Redinger was holding the hard-hitting Presidents scoreless until the seventh inning, when Ralfe Mesrobian cracked a tremendous home run far over Jack Smith's head in leftfield.

Miss Jameson Wins at Tulsa

By the Associated Press.

Tulsa, Okla., June 7.—Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, came through handily today in her first round of match play in the women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament, but Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, loomed in the path of her effort to repeat her 1937 conquest.

While Betty was lacing Mrs. Vincent Hoechst, of Dallas, 8 and 6, today, the Minnesota State champion was eliminating Mrs. A. D. Jack, of Tulsa, 9 and 8. In doing so she carded a 36 on the outward nine, three under women's par.

Miss Jameson's first nine, sprinkled with pars and a birdie deuce on the last hole, totaled 38. She was hitting her wood shots far and true and her excellent putting game was climaxed with a 40-footer on the twelfth, which ended the match.

The usual top-flight favorites, including Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., Helen Hofmann, of Salt Lake City, Jatty Berg, of Minneapolis, Mrs. Patty Newbold, of Wichita and Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, won their way into the second round.

The "baby" of the tournament, Miss Alice Daniels, of Fort Worth, 14 years old, fell before Patty Berg, 7 and 5.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Four Nats merit points in the Man of the Month contest despite the team's dreary performance against the Browns yesterday when Washington was guilty of its worst exhibition of the season.

To Harry Kelley, four points, because his relief pitching after succeeding Leonard during the second inning was entirely adequate, and because all of the four runs the Browns scored against him in the 5 1-3 innings he pitched were unearned.

To George Case, two points, because he contributed an important two-bagger that scored two runs in the Nats' seventh and because he stole a base.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he made three of the Nats' ten hits, including a perfect bunt.

To Zeke Bonura, two points, because he made two hits, drove in the Nats' first run, hit an important single in the seventh inning, and started a sparkling double play on McQuinn's grounder in the first inning with two on base.

THE SCORE:

Zeke Bonura	12	Al Simmons	3
Buddy Myer	7	Buddy Lewis	3
Pete Appleton	6	Ken Chase	3
George Case	6	Johnny Stone	2
Emil Leonard	5	Jimmy DeShong	2
Wes Ferrell	5	Mel Almada	2

Abrams-Yarosz Battle Costs Turner-Ahearn Firm $700

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The promotorial firm of Turner & Ahearn, Ltd., did a little elementary bookkeeping yesterday and found itself mired in sticky red ink to the extent of some 700 potatoes—and not the 'Brien variety, as a result of the customers' apathy toward the recent Abrams-Yarosz fight.

From a box-office viewpoint the bout was a distinct washout, falling approximately $1,500 short of the anticipated revenue. And if the 2,500 faithful who did lay their money on the line had had a premonition of what Yarosz would do, the turnstiles probably would have rusted on their swivels.

The gross receipts were $2,796. Yarosz pocketed a cool thousand for lending his presence to the affair, and on a basis of his dull performance should have been ashamed to take it. Jess James at least fired his pistol a couple times and gave his victims a little action. But it's ancient history now. Barney Ross, thinking back to his title waltz with Armstrong, was no better.

The problem now is what to do with Abrams, for Matchmaker Ahearn sees in the thick-chested lad the salvation of local boxing, for the summer at least. He thinks the boy can be built up into a good drawing card and intends to use him as often as possible and hopes the fans will like it. Something has got to be done to lure more patrons to the fights, for the firm can't continue at its current pace.

Abrams is a problem child, more or less. He's reached the stage where he's got to fight increasingly better opponents and isn't equipped with a punch potent enough to give him an even chance against the division's better workmen. It would be sheer folly, for example, to pit him against murderous punchers like Glenn Lee, Solly Kreiger, Harry Balsamo and the like.

He might outbox them, of course, and actually figures to on paper, but, on the other hand, he might win nine rounds hands down and get belted out in the tenth by one good swipe from the enemy. Hence, it wouldn't be wise to put him in against too hard a hitter—and Ahern full well realizes it.

Ahearn faces a man-sized task in obtaining opponents whom George can cope with, who stand a chance of beating the Washington boy, and who will give the fans a run for their tickets—and, in the same breath, will not knock him loose from his bridgework. If you know of any fighters who fill the bill communicate with Ahearn immediately.

Abrams is scheduled to go on the road next month after taking a brief vacation, and will fight under the auspices of Lou Diamond in and around New York. He should win a lot of bouts, too, or Mr. Diamond isn't the business man we always thought him to be. And the odd part of this is that George might come home in the autumn a ranking middleweight. He figures to break into the first ten because of his victory over Yarosz, and should he suddenly develop a punch on tour his future will be assured.

Western Outslugs Generals, 20 to 10

Slamming out 24 hits while Toby Bright was trying to calm the bats of the hard-hitting Washington-Lee nine, Western High School defeated the Little Generals, 20-10, yesterday.

Five home runs, one triple and six doubles rattled off the bats of the two teams as every man in the Western line-up got at least one hit, and all except Walker, Leatherwood, Morris and Marcey connecting safely for Washington-Lee.

Caleb Captures Feature at Charles Town and Pays $50.80 Mutuel

Best Policy Gets Place, Ado Is Third

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—The past few days have been periods of joy and gloom for W. M. Beougher, but today was all joy. His only horse, Caleb, jogged to the front and made every post a winning one in the fifth race, outstanding event of the seven-race program, Beougher's winning smile was even broader when a $50.80 mutuel was displayed on the results board.

Last week Beougher had two "gloom" periods the same day. In the first place, his horse got out in front and stopped. Then he found that a check had been placed in the claiming box and that meant the loss of his horse.

The next day joy smiled on Beougher. It was discovered that W. J. Hughes, who had claimed Caleb, did not have a horse on the grounds. It is a West Virginia rule that a claimant must have a horse at the track. Hughes had shipped his horse, Sun Victor, to Wheeling. So the claim was not allowed and, much to his surprise and joy, Caleb was taken back to Beougher's barn.

This afternoon, the one-horse stable owner danced a jig as Caleb went to the front and found no catchers in the field of eight going over the 7-furlong course. Best Policy was closest at the finish, but she was beaten three lengths. Ado was another length away. Gene Terhune did the riding and almost got his back patted off when he returned to weigh out.

Miss Green scampered out of the maiden ranks in the first race, paying a scattered backing a $9.40 mutuel. Leon Garrett had the mount and won by a length and a quarter despite the fact that Ivy X. carried the filly out entering the stretch. Ivy X. finished second, with On Account third in the limit field of eight.

Garrett rode his second straight winner in the second event and the mountains echoed the boo. Miss Wing, Garrett's mount, finished a nose in front of Anywoman and the backers of the latter struck up the anvil chorus. Third money went to Shorts. Miss Wing paid a $17 mutuel and she probably was best, for she broke poorly and had to be rushed to the front.

Mrs. E. L. Bull's Tuleyries Lad had better success than Anywoman. This time Trainer Claude Feltner saddled a definite winner in Tuleyries Lad, who had a length the better of Spotless in the third race. Little Percy managed to take down the third award in the group of eight. Lou Machado brought Tuleyries Lad to the front nearing the stretch and the gelded son of Sea Rock held Spotless safe. The winner paid $5.40.

Bootless Takes Suffolk Feature

Boston, June 7 (AP).—A photo decision was required to give Col. E. R. Bradley's Bootless his third straight victory over the Suffolk Downs oval in the North Shore Purse, a mile and 70-yard allowance race that featured today's program before a crowd of 12,000. At the end of the journey the 5-year-old son of Black Toney had a nose in front of Mrs. Emil Denemark's Genie Palatine and returned $3.60 to win.

Genie Palatine had four lengths on F. W. Webb's White Hot and paid $2.40 to place, while the latter brought $2.20 to show.

The winner was timed in 1:42 for the mile and 70 yards, stepping the first 6 furlongs in 1:11 flat and 1:38 for the mile.

Budge, Mako In Semifinals

American Team Beats Wilde and Butler.

By the Associated Press.

Auteuil, France, June 7.—The French hard court double crown hove into sight for Don Budge and Gene Mako today as the American Davis Cup combination entered the semifinals with an easy victory over the British combination of F. H. D. Wilde and D. W. Butler.

Without exerting themselves, the red-thatched Budge and his giant partner won, 6—1, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2. They dropped the third set largely because they chose to perfect their team play in anticipation of a more difficult match in the semifinal round, where they meet the Yugoslavia Davis Cup team of Franz Kukuljevic and Josip Pallada.

Kukuljevic and Pallada came through today's match with a 6—2, 6—2, 6—1, victory over Rodolpho Bossi and Vittorio Taroni, of Italy. Although Kukuljevic gave Budge plenty of trouble in the singles yesterday, the experts are of the opinion the Americans will coast to victory.

The other semifinal brackets were filled by the French team of Destremeau and Yvon Petra and the Hungarian pair of Ottar Szigeti and Ernest Gabory. The Frenchmen defeated Ferenc Puncec and Dimitri Mitic, of Yugoslavia, in the longest match of the day, 6—3, 6—3, 10—12, 4—6, 6—3, and the Hungarians eliminated Roderich Menzel and Ladislas Hecht, of Czechoslovakia, 6—3, 6—3, 7—5.

Mako also advanced in the mixed doubles, pairing with Mrs. Harry Hopman, of Australia, to win their second round match from Simone Barbier and Andre Jaquemet, of France, 0—6, 6—1, 6—4.

Lieut. Riggs Takes Title

By the Associated Press.

West Point, N. Y., June 7.—Lieut. T. S. Riggs, of the United States Military Academy, won the individual military championship at the twentieth annual West Point horse show today by flipping a coin.

Three jump-offs failed to break a tie between Riggs, riding his 17-year-old chestnut gelding, Bones, and Maj. A. W. Roffe, of the Fort Myer (Va.) team, riding the brown mare, Clipped Wings. Each performed faultlessly during the regulare competition and two jump-offs. The fourth time around each was charged with eight faults. It was then they decided to toss a coin for the prize, as both were entered in later events.

Third place went to Lieut. Chase Donaldson, of New York, who rode Marse Henry, while Capt. John Hines, of Fort Myer, piloted Rusty into fourth place.

The Fort Myer team won in three hunter classes. Billy Do, ridden by Capt. Lubberman, scored in the working hunters division; Don Soux won in the ladies' hunter class, then Billy Do came back to win the Hunter sweepstakes.

Kampouris Reports to Terry

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Alex Kampouris (left), obtained Monday by the New York Giants from the Cincinnati Reds in an even swap for Wally Berger, reported to Manager Bill Terry yesterday in time for the "crucial" four-game series with the league-leading Cubs. Kampouris, only Greek in the National League, is expected to bolster a weak spot at second base.

Having decided, after all, that the alfalfa rough isn't quite so discouraging since they sharpened the blades of their heavy niblicks, most players turned a critical eye today upon the one-inch furrows in the sand traps. Officially, these furrows have been frowned upon, as an extra hazard, since they were made famous at the Oakmont course, near Pittsburgh, but it remained to be seen whether the golfing moguls would order them removed here.

"Since most of the traps have been filled with fresh sand, in which most errant shots will be buried anyway, why go to the extra trouble of furrowing the sand to make sure the player is penalized?" asked one competitor. "It wouldn't be the open, of course, without a lot of squawking before hand, but nevertheless it looks like they want to make sure nobody takes the course apart."

The veteran "Gene" Sarazen, open king in 1922 and 1932, discarded his usual iconoclastic role to stamp the course "as fair a test as any open championship has had since the war."

Gene added: "I believe most of the squawks arise from the fact the boys were led to believe Cherryhills would be a wide-open affair. The only criticism I have to make is that the distances from green to tee—that's right—are too much for an old man. It means an extra mile for every round."

Railbirds fancy the chances of Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., professional, who shot a par 71 today, as well as Guldahl, Snead, Jimmy Hines, the two-time metropolitan New York champion; Byron Nelson and Harry Cooper, who came close in each of the last two tourneys.

Cooper, however, hasn't bolstered his friends' hopes in practice so far. A hand injury may keep Johnny Revolta, the year's leading money winner, out of the play entirely or, at least, severely handicap him. Snead has had the best practice round, a three-under-par 68.

The roster of replacements announced today: Ernest R. Nelson, Denver amateur, for Eddie Held; Alex Watson, Yonkers, N. Y., for Charles H. Mayo, jr.; Vernon Allen, Minneapolis, for Lester Bolstad; David Stewart, Greenwich, Conn., for Tom Kerrigan, Bronxville, N. Y.; Harold Lowery, Birmingham, Ala., for Gene Cook, Anniston, Ala.; Charles Weisner, Oklahoma City, for Francis Scheider; Andy Gasper, Pittsburgh, Pa., for Tony Joy; Carmen Bill, Cleveland, for Al Espinosa, Akron, Ohio; John Cochran, Jasper, Ala., for Sam D. Perry; Erie Seavall, Glendale, Calif., for Ernest Combs, Long Beach, Calif.; Henry J. Johnson, New Smyrna Beach, Fla., for Ed Fernety, Jacksonville.

New York, June 7 (AP).—Ralph Guldahl, defending champion; Sam Snead and Henry Picard today were quoted as the 8-to-1 favorites by Jack Doyle, Broadway commissioner, to win the National Open Golf Championship starting at Denver Thursday.

Harry Cooper, Byron Nelson, Johnny Revolta and Horton Smith were quoted at 10 to 1 each. At 15 to 1 were bunched Paul Runyan, Harry McSpaden, Dick Metz, Ky Laffoon, Vic Ghezzi, Jimmy Hines, Jimmy Thomson, Lawson Little, Denny Shute, Ed Dudley, Tony Penna, Ray Mangrum, Tony Manero, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen.

And Harry Greb and Mickey Walker and a host of others who blossomed as top-notchers—who did they ever lick but a lot of stumblebums in their early fights?

They were saying the other night that Yarosz had a bad knee, torn cartilages that wouldn't permit him to move in and out, or get out of danger. From where we sat, Yarosz was moving pretty nicely in there. He didn't do much fighting, chiefly because he was on the move—backwards. His knee action was all right.

What did they expect Abrams to do in his twenty-first fight—stiffen a guy who three years ago was the best middleweight in the world and still only 28? Sure, he failed to do that, but you can hardly classify the kid as a failure.

Lewis' Boots Prove Costly

Save for the fact that he made two hits yesterday and was robbed of another, it might have been said that Buddy Lewis' batting slump was affecting his fielding—a state of affairs not unknown to the big leagues.

The Nats' young third baseman, with three grievous errors, experienced the absolute worst afternoon of his big league career. He made a wild throw and two damaging fumbles. Four of the Browns' runs were the outgrowth of Lewis' boots.

But there was consolation for Manager Bucky Harris in the manner in which Lewis was taking his cut at the plate. After collecting only two hits in 33 times at bat, Lewis was reduced to attempting to get on base by bunting. That he did in the fifth inning and it seemed to restore his confidence.

For in his two appearances at the plate thereafter he was again taking his stylish swing which had deserted him from the beginning of his slump. Called by Clark Griffith the possessor of the best batting stroke among the Nats, Lewis lined a single to center in the seventh inning and in his last time at bat failed to get a hit only because Sammy West made a brilliant catch of his line drive.

The Nats muffed a glowing opportunity to gain some ground in the pennant race when they lost to the Browns. They could have lifted themselves into a virtual tie for second place with the losing Yankees and picked up some ground, too, on the fourth-place Red Sox who were losing to the Tigers. They are now five games behind the league-leading Indians.

It seems, too, that the Nats have lost three of their last four games with the eighth-place Brownies.

Today it will be Wes Ferrell vs. Jim Walkup. Ferrell will be seeking his fourth straight win and his ninth of the season.

Dutch Leonard was plagued by wildness in the Browns' three-run first inning despite the fact that he didn't issue a pass. But he was always behind the hitters on the ball and strike count and when he eased up to get the ball over the plate, they whacked it.

Rookie Howard Mills, who started for the Browns is a U. S. Navy product. The St. Louis Club purchased his release from an airplane carrier and sent him to San Antonio for seasoning last year. He throws over-hand, side-arm and under-arm.

Takoma Parish Is Recognized AsIndependent

Rev. Richard Barron to Be Pastor of Our Lady of Sorrows Church.

A mission for seven years, Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, Takoma Park, Md., is now an independent parish, it was announced yesterday.

The Rev. Richard Barron, assistant pastor at St. Martin's Catholic Church in Baltimore, Md., for 16 years, has been appointed pastor of the Takoma church by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, Md.

With the coming of the Rev. Barron, who will arrive Friday, Our Lady of Sorrows will be an established congregation, independent of any other parish. Until now it has been under the supervision of the Church of the Nativity, Brightwood, with the Rev Austin Healy as its spiritual director.

In 1930 the first mass of Our Lady of Sorrows Church was celebrated in a store at 40 Carroll avenue. Today the parish has paid off a debt of nearly $24,000, the cost of erecting the church, on Ethan Allen and Jackson avenues.

The parish has made a down payment on a house adjoining the church for the rectory.

Mrs. Arthur L. Reynolds, Mrs. Hex P. Ware, Mrs. Charles J. Spencer and Mrs. C. B. Osborn organized the Catholic League of Takoma Park eight years ago. They found there were 200 families of the faith in the town.

For two months only Sunday school classes were held in the store on Sunday afternoons. Then two masses were held every Sunday for two years until the present church was built. This was dedicated, July 17, 1932.

The Rev. John Fannon, of Nativity parish, said the first mass in the church.

I. C. C. Orders CompetingLine Off Bus Route

Glebe Road-Lee Boulevard Barred to Arlington-Fairfax Company.

Following complaint filed by the Washington, Maryland & Virginia Coach Co., the Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered the Arlington-Fairfax Motor Transportation Co. to cease operation along Glebe road to Lee boulevard and to Hatfield, it was learned yesterday.

According to C. J. Rallston, general manager of the Arlington-Fairfax line, application to use the route had been granted and buses had been running for two days when notice to cease operations was given.

Joseph Arnold, vice president of the Washington, Maryland & Virginia Coach Co., yesterday said his company had filed opposition to the application prior to the starting of operations. He said his company has been operating along Glebe road and Pershing drive for the past ten years, much of the time at a loss. With increased number of patrons at this time he said he did not consider it fair for another company to start operating in competition. One company can do well, he said, two will find themselves "in the red" at the end of a year.

No date for a hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission has been set, Ralston said.

Trade Income Rallies as Expense Index Drops to New Low.

New York, June 7.—Basic conditions have shown a slight improvement since last week, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The estimate of this year's normal demand for steel has consequently been revised upward to 37.6 per cent of capacity from 36.7 per cent a week ago, which was the lowest estimate of the year. Although last week's actual rate of output, at 29 per cent of capacity, was well below the currently estimated normal demand, production this week has declined sharply to 26.1 per cent. Despite the subnormal rate, the outlook for immediate expansion is unfavorable because of the depressing effect of last year's excessive activity.

The index of business income for the week ended May 21 rallied to 77.9 from the recession's low of 76.3 in the previous week. The index of business expenses dropped from 84.3 to a new low of 83.8. The index of expenses exceeded the index of income by only 5.9 points in the latest week as against 8.0 points in the previous week, thus extending the improvement which began a week ago. This rally, however, is not likely to hold.

For the week ended May 21 the price index of farm products, which reflects the national income, recovered slightly from the recession's low in the previous week. This increase more than offset a rise in manufactured goods prices. The purchasing power index rose to 75.1 from 73.9 in the previous week. This improvement is not likely to continue, however.

The Market

New York, June 7.—Short-term Government bonds did well, but the long terms weakened. Commodities were steady, and stocks, after early firmness, gave up the attempt to make it three good days in a row and closed with irregular prices. Stock sales were around 400,000 shares. July wheat rose 1⅛ cents to 73 cents a bushel.

News from the Iowa primaries was liked well enough in Wall Street, but the stock market smiled rather wanly. Firmer prices in the early trading failed to increase the volume of business moving and the afternoon was given over to lethargic movements that let the market down by fractions. Any heartening influence that is likely to come from legislation, administrative policy changes or shifts in the political scenery cannot be counted upon to give the securities markets anything more than a brief period of happiness. The history of the past few years of political interference with business and markets dampens hope for permanent improvement. Some one at Washington always is ready to play the luring contest.

Keeping the Water Hot.

As though it were in anticipation of a setback at the polls, a Senate committee approved a $500,000 appropriation for a general investigation of monopoly in American business, and the Federal Trade Commission reported the results of its investigation of alleged monopolistic practices in the farm implement industry. The stage is now set for a merry party to entertain the voters this autumn and to show the public that its Government is by no means letting up on the job of hazing business and keeping capital guessing as to what may lie in store for it.

All that isn't going to help to restore confidence, even though the SEC is endeavoring to encourage traders to re-enter the stock market. Moreover, so long as business is kept standing in hot water, even possible temporary stimulants, such as the spending of a few billions for pump-priming, aren't going to move it much. An election summer always is an uncertain one for industry and this one is going to be no exception, for the future at best is uncertain. The only real help in sight is that held out in the big grain crops.

One of the chief obstacles to trade, domestic and foreign, throughout the world is the uncertainty over currencies. For all the show of stabilization involved in stablization funds and huge gold reserves in some of the central banks, and the three-party agreement among the United States, Great Britain and France to maintain their currencies on a stable basis, foreign exchanges are as sketchy as ever. Dollars and sterling have kept fairly well together, but that is about all that can be said.

Could Restore Confidence.

Efforts are being made in several countries, particularly here, to start business through inflationary efforts, or reflation as it is sometimes called. For that reason any suggestion of a return to gold on a genuine basis is given a cold reception. On that subject Dr. L. J. Trip, head of the Netherlands central bank, says a pertinent thing or two. He says that currency management is no guaranty whatever for lasting stabilization and deplores that part of the tripartite agreement which makes concessions to currency instability caused by economic, financial and social policies in the countries proclaiming their wish for stability.

Dr. Trip says that no stability will come without fixed buying and selling prices for gold by all leading countries, without any provisos. This country might easily take the lead and settle forever all question of further dollar devaluation. That might look deflationary to some people for a while, but the results certainly would be a great restoration of business confidence and expansion of trade. There is nothing deflationary about that.

Banking Position.

Vigorous further deflation of member bank credit, which has been accelerated by the policy of the Treasury in making net debt retirements for the purpose of boosting excess reserves, is displayed in the condition figures of banks in 101 cities for the week of June 1. Loans and investments fell $61,000,000. The banks lost $78,000,000 of Treasury direct obligations and gained $26,000,000 of Government guaranteed bonds while experiencing a net reduction of $11,000,000 in loans. The New York banks accounted for $46,000,000 of the decrease in Treasury direct obligations and $23,000,000 of the increase in guaranteed issues, but reported a net gain of $7,000,000 in aggregate loans. Commercial loans dropped $19,000,000 at New York, $6,000,000 at Chicago and $39,000,000 at all reporting banks. The slight net gain in total loans in this city was made by a $25,000,000 rise in loans to brokers and to dealers, revealed last Thursday, which came from sales of Federal funds and special clearance transactions. Demand deposits declined $68,000,000 in St. Louis and $47,000,000 in Philadelphia, but increased $39,000,000 in New York. Reserve of all the reporting banks increased $22,000,000.

The Museum Piece.

Stocks are rapidly going out of the dividend-paying class. Once they are all out, a weight will have been removed from the market. Prices no longer will be depressed because of fears over dividends. A bull trader once said he always held it against a stock when a dividend was put on. Investors like dividends, but the investor breed is fast dying out, exterminated by the disease of uncertainty in these days of "management" for currency, commodity prices, factory production, farm crops, wages, profits and everything else by politicians and "social" experimenters who haven't the slightest idea of what it is all about, and who care less.

Briggs.

Briggs Manufacturing directors must have mistaken the road signs, for they drove up the left side of the wrong street in resuming dividend payments. The stock paid $1.50 a share last December and passed the March dividend. The payment voted today was 25 cents a share. Briggs reported 16 cents a share made in the first quarter and so is scarcely making the present payment out of current profits. Anyway, mighty few companies have seen fit to resume dividend payments that were suspended in the business slump dating from the spring of 1937.

Wheat Prices Advance With Poor Yields

Pit Expects Government Loan Price to be Higher Than Expected.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 7.—Brisk advances of 2¼ cents a bushel took place in Chicago wheat values today after temporary setbacks of a cent. Assertions were widespread that the United States Government wheat loan would likely be much higher than heretofore expected, and crop reports from numerous areas of the domestic Southwest indicated sensationally disappointing yields as well as poor quality.

A typical dispatch dated Anthony, Kan., told of threshing returns of but six to seven bushels an acre, and said early wheat would not supply a commercial crop. All late wheat, the dispatch added, was rust infected, with much of the straw dying before heads could develop.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were around the topmost point reached, 1¼@2⅛ cents up compared with yesterday's finish, July 73@73¼, September 74⅛@74¼, corn ⅛ lower to ¼ higher, July 56⅞@57, September 57¾, oats ¼@⅝ advanced, rye showing ½@¾ gain, and provisions 7 to 12 cents higher.

Steel's Social Taxes Exceed Quarter Loss

Cleveland, Ohio, June 7.—Social security taxes cost the steel industry $5,800,000 in the first three months of 1938, estimates the magazine Steel today. Aggregate net loss of the industry for that period approximated $5,000,000, indicating social security tax costs were the difference between operating in the red and making a slight profit.

Total cost of social security taxes from January 1, 1936, to March 31, 1938, has been approximately $56,000,000 to the industry, of which employers paid more than $44,000,000. These figures include only actual taxes and do not consider cost of keeping detailed employment and pay roll records and making multiple returns to Federal and State governments.

Social security tax costs to producers in the first quarter of 1938 amounted to $1.40 per ton of steel made for sale. If employes' contributions are included, the cost per ton would be $1.75, the magazine states.

By 1949, when old age pension tax rates reach a maximum, total social security tax cost to the industry would be $90,000,000, assuming pay rolls in that year equal those of 1937.

In 1937 unemployment and old age pension taxes cost the industry $30,000,000, in addition to more than $9,000,000 contributed by employes. Total taxes on employers and wage-earners on wages (excluding salaries) is estimated at $62.80 for each of the 513,000 wage-earning employes on the pay rolls during 1937. This is equivalent to a year's pay for more than 25,000, based on the $1,670 average annual steel wage last year.

Bob Burns Says—

I use'ta think that the reason why my folks back in the hills let everything go to "rack and ruin" was because they jest didn't have anything worth takin' care of in the first place.

But not long ago, I had a telephone installed in my Uncle Hod's house and when I called on him the other day, I found my Aunt cutting biscuits with the receiver, his daughter using the mouthpiece for an ink well and the baby using the cord for a jumpin' rope.
